More Democratic Recruits for the Republican Ranks.

Another Call for the Greeley-Seymour Correspondence.

Wendell Phillips on Grant and Greeley.—Mr. Wendell Phillips has written a letter to the leading colored citizens of Boston, counselling them to vote for Grant, in the course of which he says:

"My judgment is the exact opposite of Mr. Sumner's. I think every loyal man, and especially every colored man, should vote for Gen. Grant, and that the nation and freedom are safe only in the hands of the old, regular, Republican Party. * * * I know the defects of Gen. Grant's Administration as well as any man. I think distrustful as I was of him, I am able to see the good service he has unexpectedly rendered the nation. But no matter for those defects. At the most, they are fatal; and events have lifted President Grant into being today the symbol and representative of loyalty. The conspiracy between Southern secessionists and Northern Copperheads, of which, very naturally, Mr. Greeley is the tool, and, unfortunately, Mr. Sumner is the unconscious one, has made the issue clear for two parties—those who are for the nation and those who are against it. I hate no jot of my brotherly regard and sincere esteem for Mr. Sumner in thus holding him deceived. The entire faith I have in his honesty of purpose obliges me to think him duped. The only wonder is how this is possible when the South is insolent and shameless in proclaiming her intentions. The South has long seen her mistake and often confessed it. The Tribune letter makes this statement as late as June 1, 1871. That mistake was to contend for the rights of manhood and outside the Union—leaving us the Government and taking herself the part of a rebel. She has often announced, in the last instance by the lips of Jefferson Davis—that the cause was not lost, and must be won by getting possession of the Government and leaving us in the opposition. Such is the present plan. That Mr. Greeley sees it would not prevent his adhering to it. That Mr. Sumner does not see it is to me matter of profound astonishment. At such a moment the regular Republican Party becomes again the accepted and only instrument of resistance, and Grant represents loyalty as Lincoln did in 1861. * * * If Gen. Grant is set aside, who is offered us in his place? Horace Greeley. I need not tell you, my friends, what Horace Greeley is. We abolitionists knew him only too well in the weary years of our struggle. He had enough of clear moral vision to see the justice of our cause. But he never had courage enough to confess his faith. It even his nerve gave him the nerve, he never would have had principle enough to risk anything for an idea. A trimmer by nature and purpose, he has abused even an American politician's privilege of trading principles for success. But for lack of ability he would have been the chief time-server of his age. I never knew (if now any of his enemies so heedless and undiscriminating as even to claim that he was a sincere man."

The Reports From the State of New-York.—Cheering reports continue to come from all sections of our State. The Republicans are actively organizing and working to win. The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser publishes extracts from letters recently received from prominent candid and intelligent Republicans in various portions of the State, who were asked to give an unbiased opinion of the political position in their several localities. Nearly all write cheerfully, giving a good story of Republican zeal and enthusiasm and organization throughout the Empire State. They are full of encouragement, and should incite the Republicans of other States to similar exertions in support of our time-honored standard. The Albany Journal prints testimony to the same effect. It shows that the Republican cause is gaining every day, and that the corrupt coalition is steadily declining in strength and spirit. Republicans were never more earnest, and they are now beginning to prosecute the active work with great energy.

A Specimen New-York County.—A Republican Convention was held in Warren County a day or two ago, the delegates at which were asked to report the political condition in their several localities. The Albany Journal says that their reports show that in three towns there is not a Greeley Republican; that in some of the towns there are only three; that in none are there more than three, except in the town of Queensbury, which embraces Glen's Falls and has a large population. Altogether there are not more than fifty Republicans at the county, of the county who are inclined to Greeley, and it is believed that not more than carry will finally vote for him. Several have already renounced him. This is a sample of the reports from most sections. The proportion of Republicans who favor Greeley is very small and is now steadily decreasing, while many Democrats are openly against him.

New-Hampshire to the Front.—The New-Hampshire Republican State Committee has issued a brief but vigorous address to the tried and true Republican voters of the Granite State. It reminds them that on four occasions the electoral vote of New-Hampshire has been cast for candidates representing the Republican Party, and pledged to the great principles of liberty, union, emancipation and equal rights, and that on all these issues they have been confronted by a compact and powerful opposition. How changed is the situation now is thus stated: "Instead of a great historic party, whose triumphs are the glory of the land, and whose aspirations are the hope of humanity, they offer us a motley, incongruous organization, whose history began in chicanery, and whose aspirations were born in hate, disappointment and ambition. They ask us to condemn an Administration which has kept the peace, paid the debt, reduced the taxes, crushed the Ku-klux, and contributed largely to an unparalleled and abounding prosperity. They ask us to exchange stability for uncertainty, fidelity for profession, skill for the lack of it, patriotism for dissembling, and 'well enough' for ills that we know not of. They ask us to send the tried, modest, and reliable Grant for the loquacious, uncertain, and vacillating Greeley. They would have us reject the noble and faithful Wilson for the disgraced and faithless Brown. We shall not do it. The Republicans of New-Hampshire cannot aid in such folly and madness. Honest Democrats will not, for that would be adding injury to the insult of forcing upon them their life-long opponent and traducer."

An Influential Westchester Democrat Declares for Grant.—John D. McKenzie, Esq., of Dobb's Ferry, a life-long Democrat, has announced himself earnestly for Grant in a letter, which is published by the Yonkers Statesman. Mr. McKenzie has long been one of the most active Democrats in the western portion of Westchester County. Five years ago he stumped the county for Seymour, and small names had been looked to by his party for vital assistance in political campaigns. He is a member of the Committee of Seventy of this City, and his influence is wide-spread and potent. In his letter he says: "As a Democrat I have not supported the Administration of Gen. Grant, and even now I believe that in it there is very much which should be censured; yet, when the issue is presented to the voters of the United States, whether a firm, consistent, and, in the main, an honest and intelligent Administration shall be continued in power, relying upon the representatives of the people to correct all existing mistakes and abuses in it, or whether a new and untried conglomeration of men, of many political creeds, entertaining diverse views of public policy, banded together under the cry of civil service reform, their leaders plunging after the spoils of office, and all under the guidance of one so well known to the entire country as the avowed advocate and exponent of all the ideas of the past thirty years—it does seem to me that all who desire permanence to government and the safety and prosperity of the States should, without hesitation, take their place among those who seek to retain Gen. Grant as Chief Executive of the nation, rather than among those who seek to confer the position upon Mr. Greeley."

A Family of Democrats for Grant.—Honest men who seek the welfare of the country are everywhere flocking to the standard of Grant. The ranks of the Republicans, who deserve the title, are virtually unbroken, and they are daily being reinforced by scores and hundreds of sincere Democrats who realize that in the re-election of Grant alone can peace and prosperity continue to bless the nation. From the Albany Evening Journal we quote a sample paragraph showing the way the tide is turning. That journal says: "At a watering-place, not far from this city, within the past month, a prominent Democrat of the City of New-York, a gentleman about sixty-five years old, speaking of the candidates for President of the United States, announced that he and all of his family, and of his son's families (twenty-eight voters all told) had always voted the Democratic ticket, but all of them would vote for Grant; that they had known Greeley all his life, and could not go him for President."

Why Not Print These Letters?—The Binghamton Republican once more calls for the publication of the letters of Mr. Greeley and Mr. Seymour relating to the Democratic nomination for the Presidency, which, it says, have now been a month in the hands of Mr. Greeley's friends—it thinks in the keeping of Mr. Waldo Hutchins. The Republican says: "It now becomes our duty to say—as Mr. Greeley has so far declined to say it—that the letters contain direct and undeniable evidence of every essential stage of the collusion which has been charged by this journal. The proof is in our hands, and we shall submit it to the public in the time and way most likely to be effective in the interests of truth, good faith and good principles. We have re-examined and re-tested the whole case; with more care, we reaffirm all the original charges; we find that in every respect our own charges are true, our proofs were all correct, and we say that the matter, not charged by us, a witness was possibly wrong as to form, but right, we believe, in substance."

Delegates to the Republican State Convention.—The following are additional delegates chosen to the Republican State Convention at Utica, Aug. 31:

The Colored Republicans.—The colored Republican, George W. Francis Association, met last evening at No. 129 Spring-street, Mr. John H. Becket presiding.

Mr. Myers stated the necessity his race had of standing up for the present Administration, and thought it would be some useful information on the subject of local politics.

Mr. George W. Francis spoke next, and expressed his sorrow in seeing a colored traitor at the Cooper Institute on Thursday night supporting the Greeleyite ticket.

After enrolling some members, the meeting adjourned to Friday next.

Fifth Assembly District Greeley Campaign Club.—The Greeley and Brown Campaign Club of the Fifth Assembly District met last evening, at No. 243 Spring-street, Mr. Wolfgang Kuefner in the chair. The attendance was confined to some twenty persons. A committee of five was appointed to select a committee on organization. It was resolved, before the meeting adjourned, to give a free lunch to the Democrats and Liberal Republicans of the district, as the best means, in the opinion of the Club, that could be taken to forward the interests of their candidate.

Republican Head-quarters.—At the Republican Head-quarters, yesterday, things were very brisk and encouraging. The Secretary was in receipt of letters from all parts of the country, giving detailed accounts of the progress of the canvass.

The Tribune and the Hebrew Voters.—Mr. Greeley's organ has been lately making several attempts as frantic as they are clumsy to conciliate that numerous section of our Hebrew fellow-citizens, who felt justly indignant over the insult administered to their race and their religion at the last but one of the Chappaqua matinées. The Tribune probably counts upon public forgetfulness of the following scandalous colloquy faithfully related by our reporter: "The question of the Indian policy then came up, and Mr. Ashley, who sat at his (Mr. Greeley's) elbow, stated his experience while Governor of Montana. 'You see,' he remarked, 'that when Grant first began to turn his attention toward the subjection of the Indians in the West, at the close of the rebellion, he was importuned by the Methodist denomination to send out a Methodist missionary to convert as many of the red devils as possible. President Grant assented, and in a short time the Methodist preacher began his ministrations. He had been in business there but a short time before the Presbyterians got wind of it, and also wanted to send a missionary. Grant gave them a chance, and the red-skins soon were involved in the tangles consequent upon a mixture of two religious systems. Then another sect sent out a missionary, and another, until there was but one denomination left out in the cold, and that was the Jewish sect. Grant finally yielded to the solicitations of the latter, and a Jewish rabbi took the train for the far West. So soon as he arrived, he expressed a wish to have some soldiers detailed for special duty, and without thought of ill, the request was granted. The rabbi went out on the plains, and sent the soldiers to catch some Indians and bring in to him. They did so, and so determined was the rabbi to convert the Indians, which are popularly supposed to be the lost tribes of Israel, that he actually circumcised them, with the assistance of the soldiers, as fast as they were brought in.

Here Mr. Greeley, with his eyes opened wide in amazement, interrupted—'Circumcise them! Why, I shouldn't think they could stand it. What did they do?'

"'Stand it!' said Mr. Ashley. 'Why, they couldn't help themselves, and as fast as they were circumcised they just got their traps together and "leaned" toward Canada.'

"'Well! I never!' said Horace; 'I tell you what, Ashley! When I get to be President, I'll send a lot of these rabbis out there and let them circumcise every red-skin they can lay their hands upon. Do you suppose they would "lean" toward Canada?'

The Liberal Republican National Committee.—The Greeley Head-quarters, Glenham Hotel, were dull yesterday. The rooms were deserted the greater part of the time by everybody except the Secretaries. Ex-Senator James R. Doolittle, whose name a few days ago was on the lips of every one at head-quarters, seems to want appreciation since the enamelled dicker are in the Times of Thursday. The exposé is spoken of with bated breath, and deprecating shakes of the head, and Doolittle stock has sensibly declined in the Greeley market.

A letter from Eufaula, Ala., to Secretary Jasper W. Johnson, dated Aug. 39, and acknowledging the receipt of campaign documents, says:

"Some of us have time to work on the secret, but with little success. A few intelligent men say they may vote for Greeley, but the mass and bulk of them will vote for Grant, under the influence of carpet-bag and scalawag advisers. We have a colored Greeley Club organized here, but only a few men here."

The Colored Voters—Asking Advice, but Optimists.—Mr. Frederick Douglass speaks as follows, in the Washington New National Era, to the colored voters of the Union: "A tender regard for the feelings of certain well-known colored gentlemen in this city has induced us to delay our testimony against a practice which is becoming too common among colored men, and which we would like to see discontinued. It may be well enough to solicit the opinions of public men upon the merits of particular measures and measures; but applying to certain of them for advice as to how to vote is a humiliating practice, from which colored men would do well to abstain. It places our race in a false position. We have been enfranchised, and invited to vote, in the face of a powerful opposition based in large part on our special inequality to the white race, and our general unfitness to take part in government. This opposition is not extinct, but only overpowered. It is ready to spring into life with all its ancient vigor. It only wants the argument and the occasion. We are opposed to supplying it with the argument by confessing our ignorance and servility, by applying to white men to tell us how to vote, of the occasion by taking their advice and voting the Democratic Party into power." In concluding, Mr. Douglass says: "Let no one be deceived, however, the great mass of the colored voters of the country know full well how to vote and who to vote for in the present grand political canvass."

How the Greeleyites Cipher it Out.—The Greeley journals have originated and extensively circulated an absurd statement that a canvass in one school district in Sharon, Penn., showed eighty-eight Republicans for two for Grant. The statement received Sharon in due season, and taints the way the Sharon Herald disposes of it: "The item is correct enough, except that Sharon is not divided into school districts, and therefore a canvass in one would be a canvass of the whole town; no canvass of the town has ever been made to determine in what proportion the Greeley and Grant Republicans stand to each other; and of over 900 Republican voters in the borough, we cannot, by the most persistent inquiry find more than six Republicans who will vote for Greeley, and we can name twenty Democrats, the best Democrats in the town, too, who will not vote the Chappaquack ticket."

The Arkansas Rebels on Greeley.—The La Crosse (Wis.) Republican publishes an extract from a private letter written by Mr. Wm. J. Scott, at Jacksonport, Ark., to a member of his family in that city, wherein he says: "The political contest waxes warm here, and woe be unto us if the Greeley party are successful. He is supported here only by the rebels, and they openly say that if Greeley is elected this country will be too warm for any Northern man to live in, and I know it to be a fact. Even already, held in check as they are by the strong arm of both State and National Administrations, they show the cloven foot in their suppressed and muttered imprecations against men whose only fault is that they were born in the manner born."

Drawing Himself Out of That Crowd.—Mr. A. B. Cady, of Waterville, Oneida County, is naturally indignant at the wrong use of his good name by the Greeleyites to bolster up their failing fortunes. In a letter to the Utica Herald he says: "I this morning received a circular, purporting to be issued by the 'Liberal Republican County Committee,' to which I find my name attached as one of that Committee. I have not lent or sanctioned the use of my name for any such organization, nor cannot sanction any measures tending to disturb the present prosperity of one country. I shall vote for U. S. Grant next Fall, if I live."

Greeley's Epitaph.—Is Greeley dead? No; but he has composed the inscription which he wishes to have placed upon his tombstone. It runs as follows: "May it be written on my grave that I never was a follower of the Democratic Party, and lived and died in nothing its debtor."

Grant's Majority in California.—The San Francisco Alta exposes the shallow pretenses of the Tribune respecting what the latter paper calls the purposes of the Liberal movement in California. The Alta says: "We are sufficiently posted as to Greeley's strength in this city and State, and can safely predict that Grant will carry San Francisco and California this year by a far larger vote than he did in 1868."

The Honest Democrats.—Over one hundred Democrats of Elmira are said to have signed the call for a meeting to organize a straight-out Democratic Club. And there are enough such almost everywhere to prevent their feeling lonely. The Syracuse Journal says that in that city the open revolt in the Democratic ranks is more than sufficient to make good all liberal losses to the Republicans, and that is the fact in a great number of the towns of Central New-York. The Journal also says that a letter from one of its subscribers at Des Moines, Iowa, contains the information that the Democratic Grant organization in that city, embraced at the date of his writing 542 names of Democrats who have enlisted for the campaign. The same writer asserts that this strong demonstration is the reflection of the feelings and acts of thousands of Iowa Democrats. Week exchanges give hundreds of individual cases of this same nature.

Alvord—His Turn-Over.—The Troy Times tells the following respecting Thomas G. Alvord, of Onondaga County: "On Sunday, July 28, Mr. Alvord was the guest of a personal friend, a member of the Court of Impeachment. He then spoke without reserve upon political issues, and defined his own position. He declared that he desired the nomination for Governor for Grant purposes. He asserted that if the Republicans would give it to him he could bring the members of the canal Ring to his support, which we believe to be true. He further declared, in the most positive manner, that he could not join the Greeley party, and gave the reasons which would prevent his doing so. Last Monday morning, and Wednesday night he found enough encouragement from Democrats at Saratoga that he might have a place on their ticket, to come out for Greeley. He was waiting for bids for weeks. When he got one he went off and did not stand on the order of his going. There is anything in this sudden change of the political position of this man which makes his adherence to any party desirable, we do not now know what it is. The Republican Party is rid of one of the most dangerous Tammany decoys that ever floated into the Legislature. If our party does not gain any votes by his absence it will gain in moral character."

Rally at Greenwich, Conn.—A correspondent writes: "On Wednesday evening the Grant and Wilson Club held an enthusiastic meeting at the Town Hall, which was made greater by the arrival of the Boys in Blue of Rye, about 100 in number. This is the first uniformed organization in the State, we believe. The meeting was addressed by Mr. James M. Ives, Col. Bartram and others. When passing the residence where Gov. Stewart L. Woodford is spending the Summer months a halt was made and three hearty cheers given for that gentleman. The Rye Club returned home on the 10 o'clock train, and although notice had been given to the railroad company, no extra cars were provided, and the men were packed into a common freight-car. This is characteristic of the New-Haven Railroad Company. Conductor Abell treated the Club with the greatest indignity."

The Democratic Candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania.—The personal appearance of the Democratic candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania is thus sketched by the Mauch Chunk Gazette: "Mr. C. R. Buckalew, who goes through Mauch Chunk two or three times a week, is a thin, nervous-looking man, quite below the medium stature. He has an unpleasant stoop, and a very dark complexion. His gait is rather shambling, and, altogether, he is unprepossessing. He does not look like a smart, active man, but like a worked-to-death merchant, whose financial troubles were worrying the life out of him."

The Greeley Bubble in Monroe County.—The Greeley organs published with a great flourish a little while ago a call for a Greeley meeting in Monroe County, the names of many Republicans being attached to it without authority, or under a totally erroneous idea of its nature. Now that the thing is being understood in its true light as simply a Democratic dodge, the signers are rapidly withdrawing their names, and, but few beside the prime movers adhere to it now. The Rochester Democrat publishes a card containing the names of twenty Republicans in the town of Perinton—which is claimed to be a Greeley stronghold—whose names were attached to this call, and who repudiate Greeley now that it is plainly to be seen that the movement can result only in strengthening the Democratic Party in every department of Government. The paper, it says, has been presented to but a small proportion of the signers of the original call from that town, as yet; but scarcely any have refused to attach their names. The Democrat also publishes a card from Hon. Chauncey S. Baker, of that city, who recently resigned his position as a member of the Republican City Committee, but has realized how greatly he was deceived. He now says: "I have, therefore, in the exercise of an honest conviction, and aiming to act conscientiously, become actuated in my own mind that our Liberal Republican reform movement is unwise."

Mr. Greeley as a Preacher.—There has always been a good deal of mystery connected with Mr. Greeley's trip through the Southern States a year ago. Under pretense of answering an invitation to lecture before an agricultural society in Texas, it is generally believed that the journey had a political significance, and was intended to pave the way for the possible contingency of Mr. Greeley being the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. As all events, his letters written to the Tribune during the trip foreshadowed with remarkable accuracy the state of things that now exists. What could be more truthful in the line of prophecy, for instance, than the following extract from one of Mr. Greeley's letters, dated at Memphis, June 3, 1871, and published in the Tribune on the 6th of that month. Speaking of the rebels whom he now invites to "shake hands across the bloody chasm," he says:

"They propose to renew the fight, but not with guns and saber. They expect to regain, as Democrats, through election, the power they lost as rebels through war."

Not only did Mr. Greeley thus correctly state the objects which the rebels are now seeking to accomplish by his election, but he appears to have been let into the secrets of the way in which they propose to do it. He was indiscreet enough a blab it out, and here it is as told in the same letter:

"They will seek to coerce enough of it (the colored vote) into voting the Democratic ticket to give them a majority of the Southern electoral vote for next President."

This game of trying to "coerce the colored vote" was attempted at the recent election in North Carolina, and it is probably owing to its partial success that the Republican majority was not ten thousand instead of two thousand. It will, doubtless, be tried on a more extensive and systematic scale at the Presidential election, and the Republicans of the South will do well to take a hint from Mr. Greeley's indiscreet revelations and prepare themselves to meet it.

Finding that there was no further bone of contention the meeting adjourned to next Wednesday.

Sharp-Pens Sensation Based Upon Statistics—Democratic Employers to be Prosecuted for Intimidating Negro Voters.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

RALEIGH, Aug. 15.—Official returns of the vote in eighty-four counties have been received, in which Caldwell gets 9,337, and Merrimon 21,408.

J. W. Edmund, one of the registrars for Robeson County, and H. B. Bacon and W. S. Floyd have been bound to the next term of the Superior Court for intimidation of Republican voters. The Democratic and Liberal State Committees have forwarded to each county and township Committee throughout the State a printed circular, asking twenty questions relative to frauds. The impression prevails here that Merrimon will contest the election if Greeley is elected, and not otherwise. The circular will appear in the Carolina Era, the central organ of the Republican Party, to-morrow.

Three negroes, Jimmy Simpson, Henry Bryan and Tom Griffith, who knocked down and robbed Mr. Wm. Hicks, a citizen of this county, were committed to jail yesterday on a charge of burglary and larceny.

A well-posted citizen of Alamance County informs us they will lose ten per cent. of voting Merrimon's vote in that county. I hear similar news from Harnett County, and from several townships of this county.

INDIANA.

Enthusiastic Republican Meeting at Plymouth—Speech by Gen. John M. Harlan.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

PLYMOUTH, Ind., Aug. 16.—Today Kentucky's gifted orator, Gen. John M. Harlan, addressed one of the most enthusiastic meetings ever assembled at this place. There were from 1,500 to 2,000 persons present, and as the speaker was introduced he was received with three loud cheers. The General addressed the audience for two and one-half hours, and it was conceded to be one of the most truthful, logical and telling speeches of the campaign. No effort had been made to get up a demonstration, yet there were more present and greater enthusiasm prevailed than when Mr. Hendricks, the Democratic candidate for Governor of this State, whose appointment was heralded far and wide, a few weeks ago. Democratic stronghold, a few weeks ago. Mr. Harlan is a gentleman in every respect. He is evidently a man of eminent ability, and made an impression here long to be remembered favorably. Even the Democrats went away convinced with the truth of his remarks. At the close of the speech three cheers were given for Grant and Wilson, three for the State ticket, three for Gen. Jasper Packard, our candidate for Congress, and three for the county ticket.

Progress of the Liberal Movement—The Straight-Out Democrats Selecting Full Delegations—Democratic Speakers Out for Grant.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 16.—Gen. William T. Ward, the Whig member of Congress from this State in 1851 and 1853, and one of Sherman's best Generals, will make fourteen speeches in Kentucky for Grant. He has heretofore been a Conservative.

Hon. W. O. Bradley, of Garrard County, made a speech this evening to a rousing Republican meeting in this city. Ward and Bradley voted for Seymour in 1868.

The Republicans of Frankfort are to have a great rally on Saturday night.

There is good authority for saying that O'Conor, of New-York, will soon write a letter indorsing the Straight-out Democratic Convention.

A large meeting of influential Democrats in Trimble County adopted resolutions denouncing Greeley, and appointing a delegation to the Louisville Convention. Among the delegates are County Judge Bartlet, and County Attorney Yerger. The Convention, for ease and respectability, will astonish the Greeleyites. Houston Daniel predicts that the Republicans will, before November, be compelled to fight two conventions of the Louisville Convention, paying no attention the Liberal side-show. Letters from A. H. Stephens, of Georgia, report that the State will be represented by a full delegation.

Seventeen Democratic papers of Georgia oppose his so-called Liberalism.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Probable Pardoning of Some of the Ku-klux Prisoners—Cheering News from Pennsylvania—The Nicaraguan Minister.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 16.—The President returns to-night to Long Branch. There was no business of general public interest transacted during his visit, as there was no business except the ordinary routine needing attention.

THE KUKLUX PRISONERS.

It is probable that some of the Kuklux prisoners at Albany will soon receive pardons, but no pardons have yet been made out.

THE PRESIDENT WILL NOT VISIT CHATTANOOGA.

The President today wrote a letter declining the invitation to visit Chattanooga. On consultation with the members of the Cabinet, it was determined to be impracticable to accept. The invitation was the more acceptable, that in a time when partisan feeling runs high, it came from citizens without regard to party. It was, on that account, declined with much reluctance.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Reports from Pennsylvania show the most hopeful feeling among Republicans that the Republican State ticket will be elected in October. The prospects are regarded by Republicans in the State as much brighter than they were three weeks ago.

UNITED STATES COURT EXPENSES COMPARED.

Somebody has now taken to a comparison of the expenses of running the United States Courts under the present Administration and the past. Two or three facts are overlooked. Under the last Administration the fees of the Courts, amounting to $900,000 and more, were applied directly to paying the expenses of the Courts, and did not appear in the Treasury accounts of costs. In the next place, in eleven States, the Judiciary was practically suspended, and, therefore, cost almost nothing. The Courts have since been restored in those States, adding, of course, to the expense. Then the Kuklux trials have swelled the labor and expense of the Courts in the last year. The increase, as will be seen, is much greater apparently than really, and had it not been for the Kuklux, the expenses would hardly have increased at all.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE NICARAGUAN MINISTER.

Señor Don Emilio Benard was today introduced to the President by the Acting Secretary of State, and delivered his credentials as Minister Resident of Nicaragua.

The following is a translation of the remarks which he made on the occasion:

MR. PRESIDENT: I have the honor to hand to your Excellency the credentials which accredit me as Minister Resident of Nicaragua to the Government of the United States of America. His Excellency the President of Nicaragua could not have distinguished me in a more grateful manner than by conferring upon me the honorable mission of making more intimate, if this be possible, the cordial relations which fortunately exist between the two countries, and certainly, Mr. President, nothing will more strengthen my zeal in the pursuit of so honorable a object which the Government has in view.

The President replied as follows:

MR. BENARD: You are welcome as the Diplomatic Representative of your country. I trust that the favorable anticipations with which you say you have entered upon your mission will not be disappointed by anything which may happen during your abode here. There is nothing, so far as I am aware, in the relations between the United States will tend to occasion representations that they may not be maintained upon a footing of the utmost cordiality. The endeavors which you may make for that purpose shall be heartily reciprocated by me.

THE FORT HALL RESERVATION.

It seems there was a mistake in the announcement that Henry W. Reed, of Iowa, was appointed agent for the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, as it is now said that no such appointment is contemplated.

THE WATERMAN PATENT.

The Henry Waterman patent-extension case was argued today before the Commissioners of Patents by Charles M. Keller for the applicant and by Clinton Hutton for the New-York Bridge Company, concerning the extension. This is the patent under which all iron-fire surfaces are made and tempered, and also for bridge purposes.

A Train Wrecked on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad—Three Persons Injured.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SCRANTON, Penn., Aug. 16.—The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad train, which left New-York this afternoon at 4 o'clock, became a complete wreck this evening at Henryville, a short distance this side of Stroudsburg. The passengers miraculously escaped injury. The locomotive, Col. Serrano, is now on the track smashed to atoms. The fireman, head brakeman and baggage-master, John Carling, are dangerously injured.

Troops to be Employed Against the Indians—The Lessons Saw and Another Tribe.

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 16.—The Indians of San Pete County are still committing outrages. In a conference of Gens. Ord and Morrow, it was determined to employ troops, and that three companies of infantry should be dispatched to the scene of the outrages at once. Cavalry is now on the way here from Fort Steele and other points, and will be sent forward without delay. There is no doubt now that the Indians are fairly on the war-path, they having boldly declared their intention to fight. Gen. Morrow, however, is still hopeful of making peace without bloodshed. The cause of the Indian hostility is said to be the want of food and clothing.

The writ of prohibition against the City to enforce the collection of $600 monthly, for license to sell liquors, has been sustained by Judge McKean, the ordinance having been declared invalid.

The trial of Ethan Obey for killing Charles M. Dalson, about two months ago, resulted this evening, in the acquittal of Obey. It will be remembered that Dalson published infamous statements against Obey and his wife, when Obey met and deliberately shot him dead.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis for the Past Twenty-Four Hours.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 17—1 A. M.—The barometer is highest over the South Atlantic coasts, where rain has prevailed, but now followed by partly cloudy weather; cloudy weather and rain and southerly to easterly winds continue from Virginia to Maine; clear weather and light to fresh winds have generally prevailed from Texas to Alabama, and thence to Lake Erie and lower Michigan the barometer has decidedly fallen from Kansas and Missouri and to Lake Superior, with fresh southerly to easterly winds and partly cloudy weather; an area of low barometer is apparently advancing eastward toward the north-west.

PROBABILITIES.

Southerly to easterly winds and clear weather generally prevail on Saturday over the Western Gulf States; winds veering to westerly and clearing weather from Florida to North Carolina; southerly winds and clearing but partly cloudy weather for the Middle States, and with cloudy weather for New-England, and with partly cloudy weather from Tennessee to Lake Erie. The barometer continues falling from the Missouri and Upper Lakes, with southerly to southeasterly winds and increasing cloudiness, and with probably threatening weather and brisk winds over the latter. But very few of the regular midnight telegraphic reports have as yet been received.

CHARLES R. BUCKALEW.

Record of the Democratic Candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania.

A Steadfast Supporter of the Rebellion—Consistent Opposition to Every Measure for the Restoration of the UNION.

EUROPE AND AMERICA

We ask the voters of Pennsylvania to examine attentively the record of Charles R. Buckalew as a member of the United States Senate for six years, presented below, and decide from it what claims he has now on them for the highest honors within their gift.

Charles R. Buckalew, the Democratic candidate for Governor, served as a United States Senator from Pennsylvania from 1863 till 1869. It is well known—in fact, notorious—that all through the war his sympathies were with the rebels. He was a leader among the copperhead Democracy, that wing of the party which kept up a constant fire in the rear of the Union armies, by giving aid and comfort to the enemy. He was not an open enemy, like Vallandigham; but a crafty, politic adversary, who, whenever it was possible, would move in disguise and cover up his tracks. He was, to all intents and purposes a rebel in the ranks of the loyal men who were fighting against treason. He was, therefore, a fit and trusty emissary of the Confederacy—one who could be relied on to impart any information that might damage the Union cause and help the rebels; one who was willing to consult with the rebel agents in Canada, and encourage them to persevere in their efforts to overthrow the Republic. At home he was in the confidence of those organizations formed to resist the draft, and was the head and front of a powerful opposition in his own county—a combination whose acts were as treasonable as was the firing on Fort Sumter. When men were most needed to fill decimated ranks, and conscription had to be resorted to, Buckalew not only tacitly counseled resistance to the process of the law, but aided and encouraged it by welcoming deserters and fugitives from the draft. So firmly and steadfastly was he committed to the cause of disunion that he never permitted himself to say or do aught that might injure the rebel cause. When forced to act he was always found helping the enemy, whether as a private citizen or a public officer. His record as a United States Senator is in complete harmony with his other acts. That the people of Pennsylvania may judge this way by his acts, we append the record of his votes while Senator:

Record of Charles R. Buckalew, as Shown by his Votes in the United States Senate, 1863-69.

I. That Charles R. Buckalew opposed every measure calculated to aid in the suppression of the rebellion.

1. He voted against paying bounties to volunteers. He said men should be induced to enlist by all bounties, because he hated the cause for which they fought, and wanted to discourage the enlistment of volunteers.

2. He voted against giving the black soldiers the same pay as white. A pro-slavery rebel sympathizer hating Democrat, he believed the negro already had a claim upon him, and rebel that the Black man had found his loyalty, his bravery and his manhood. Buckalew would still have had him do drudge.

3. He voted against the Conscription law, without which it would have been impossible to maintain the efficiency of the armies and defeat the rebellion. When this law came to be enforced he encouraged an organization to resist the execution.

4. He voted against an appropriation of $25,000,000 to pay one hundred day volunteers, or emergency men. He would rather that the State Capitol had fallen into the hands of the enemy than that Lee had been driven back from Gettysburg.

5. He voted against the bill to enforce the exemption of the collection of soldiers' claims against the Government. This was entirely consistent. He was in favor of paying soldiers only as little as possible; and when a soldier had lost his life in the service his representatives must say as dearly as possible for collecting his claim.

6. He voted for paying rebel slave owners for slaves drafted or received as volunteers into the Union armies; and would today vote for compensating the rebels for the loss of all their slaves and for pensioning disabled rebel soldiers. Such a course would be consistent with his every act and every word.

II. That Charles R. Buckalew hindered, in every possible way, the work of reconstruction, on most apt terms acceptable to the rebels.

1. He was opposed to Senators taking an oath renewing their allegiance and fidelity to the United States. Having acted with the traitors himself, and giving aid and comfort to the enemy and never having renounced his treason, he could not have voted otherwise.

2. He voted against a resolution providing that neither House of Congress should admit Senators or Representatives from the rebel States, until Congress should have declared such States entitled to such representation.

3. He voted against admitting into Congress the loyal representatives from Tennessee.

4. He voted against the Reconstruction acts and the supplements thereto.

5. He voted against the bill readmitting the seceded States.

6. He voted against the resolution excluding from the Electoral College the vote of rebel States not yet reorganized.

III. Charles R. Buckalew opposed every measure calculated to secure the political and civil rights of the colored race.

1. He voted against the Civil Rights bill, securing equality before the law to all men, without regard to color or race. Of this vote he declared that a black man should not have the same legal rights as other men—that he should be excluded from churches, from schools, from colleges, from railway cars, from hotels, from steam-boat cabins, from theatres, and from all public privileges. This doctrine is now held by the rebels and Copperheads, where black men are shot for attempting to ride in street-cars.

2. He voted against an amendment to permit colored citizens to vote and hold office in Montana.

3. He voted for an amendment to prohibit colored persons from becoming citizens of the United States.

4. He voted against the repeal of the Fugitive Slave law.

5. He voted against establishing the Freedmen's Bureau, which was the means of bringing relief and succor to thousands of destitute and suffering blacks.

6. He voted against furnishing temporary relief to destitute blacks in the District of Columbia.

7. He voted against admitting Nebraska with a Constitution enfranchising the colored residents.

8. He voted against the Fifteenth Amendment, securing the ballot to the colored men of the United States, and raising these down-trodden millions to the dignity of American citizens. He is against this amendment still, and would vote to abolish it.

IV. Charles R. Buckalew opposed wholesome financial measures, necessary to secure stability, and confidence among business men, and protect the credit of the nation.

1. He opposed the National Banking act—a measure without which the rebellion could not have been crushed and the financial affairs of the Government successfully administered, which gave stability to the country, and subsequently enabled the Administration to provide for the payment of the national debt.

2. He opposed the adoption of a uniform system of bankruptcy, a measure which has brought relief to thousands of business men, and greatly stimulated mercantile and manufacturing enterprises.

3. He favored a redundant currency, to the end that financial confidence might be weakened by a high rate of premium on gold, and by discouraging the gradual return to a specie basis.

V. Charles R. Buckalew voted uniformly against measures for the benefit of the industrious, and striking heavily at the vital interests of manufactures.

He favored the passage of an act to reduce the tax on raw cotton, so as to benefit his rebel friends; but when the bill to increase the duties on imports, and the bill taxing a tax on imported coupes and copper ores were under consideration, he voted nay.

This is the record of Charles R. Buckalew, and we look in vain for any act or vote of his in aid of the Government in its life struggle with treason. We challenge his supporters to show from his record as a United States Senator, a single word spoken in defense of the Government, or a single vote given for the suppression of the rebellion. They will fail to find, in all his long service in Senate, a word of sympathy for the Union cause, or a word in denunciation of those who sought to disrupt the nation.

KENTUCKY.

Confirmation of the Report of the Attempt of Democrats and Liberals to Break up a Republican Meeting at Lexington.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 15.—The statement sent you last night to the effect that the State militia was in the crowd that mobbed the Republican District election at Lexington Monday night having been contradicted by a Liberal paper of that city, the following card has been issued:

LEXINGTON, Aug. 12.—We, the undersigned, were seated as speaking on Monday night, by request made the following statement in regard to the disturbance at the Republican District election that night: The disturbance was commenced by boys and young men evidently not up to 21 by older persons near them. Prominent among the crowd in inciting and encouraging them was Colonel Bennett, who was well aware that there was a new voter less than four or five of the State militia in uniform in persons of whom he was themselves, we saw not less than four or five guns. One of the militia endeavored to get on the stand with the speaker and preside at the evident purpose of interfering with them. Upon our opposing and remonstrating with him upon his doing, he desisted. Two of us were struck with eggs. The police did not make an arrest, though the same all the time the crowd generally dispersed. Then instead of attempting to arrest the rowdies and caught who were engaged in hooting, jeering and throwing eggs, there seemed to arise two or three who were endeavoring to keep the colored men from forcibly opening the ballots heaped upon them. We have read the foregoing card, and of our own knowledge know that the statements made therein are unexceptionably true.

(Signed.) JOS. H. THOMKINS, J. C. HAMILTON, W. C. JACKSON, J. H. HARRIS.

All of these gentlemen are respected citizens of Lexington. The statement may be relied on.

At a meeting of the colored people of Maysville, resolutions condemning Sumner's course were adopted. The State Convention of straight Democrats will be held here Sept. 5, to nominate an electoral ticket, and appoint a State General Committee.

Scene in a News Stand.

Time, early morning; place, news stand. Enter intelligent-looking man, addressing sharp-looking woman behind the counter.—"Want the TIMES." "Just one left; here you are." Setting down in gale of Mercantile and Stationery party gaze. "What paper gets the best?" "O it!" replied the woman, "people seem to be going back on the Tribune and Herald. Why, there is Mr. B., he's taken the Tribune for years ten years, but he's stopped; and see it to him the other day. 'Are you going back on old Horace?' and he, he, 'I replied (think I am!)'"

THE COLORED VOTERS.

A Searching and Vigorous Reply to Mr. Sumner from Colored Citizens of Tennessee.

The colored voters of Nashville and vicinity, in mass-meeting assembled, Thursday, Aug. 8, unanimously adopted the following letter in an expression of their sentiments in regard to the recent letter and advice of Hon. Charles Sumner:

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 9, 1872.

Hon. Charles Sumner, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: Having some days since, noticed your letter addressed to certain worthy colored fellow-citizens of Washington, D. C., in which you presume to advise them and us in reference to the proper course to be pursued by the colored voters of the United States, in the coming Presidential campaign, permit us, as humble citizens, and as those who have hitherto been among your many admirers, to call your attention to a few facts. In doing this, however, we take the liberty to say that you may rest assured that whatever your future course may be, the colored people of this Republic will never prove so recreant to every sense of honor, dignity and humanity as for a moment to be ungrateful for what you have done for them (or the slave, if you desire to say that with your review of "the antecedents and present positions" of the various candidates before us we are not entirely satisfied. More especially is this true when we consider the fact that you are utterly silent as to your worthy colleague, our choice for the Vice-Presidency, Hon. Henry Wilson, of Massachusetts.

Your communication to which we refer is suggestive of a number of queries, a few of which it is our present intention to lay before you.

First—Is it not apparent that the Democrats have formed an alliance with Horace Greeley and a few other Republicans to carry out the purposes and sustain the principles avowed by them four years ago under the leadership of Seymour and Blair?

In other words, is it not true that the leaders of the Democratic Party adopt Mr. Greeley and the Cincinnati platform for the sole purpose of wresting the political power from that party which is the author of every right conceded to the black man North and South, and vesting it in that party which has always acted upon the presumption that we had no rights they were bound to respect?

Second—If the political records of our Republic speak the truth when they avow that the uniform course of the Democratic Party for nearly half a century has been one of opposition to every measure calculated to benefit the black man, politically or socially, how can you, Mr. Sumner, from the stand-point of a true friend, ask us to form a coalition with them rather than with our tried and true friends? You say "they have changed." Perhaps that is true. You say "by their fruits ye shall know them."

Third—Then we inquire, have not the leaders of the Democratic Party, who are now loudest in their denunciation of the President, and praise of Greeley, uniformly resisted the passage of all measures introduced by yourself and some Republicans, looking to the full protection of colored citizens in their rights and immunities in this Government? Neither the word nor the bond of the Democracy is sufficient to cause us to forget the war of proscription they have waged so bitterly against us, and which would inevitably have been successful, had not the power been placed in the Federal power, wielded by President Grant and a Republican Congress. We, as intelligent and considerate citizens of this country recognize the necessity of two political parties extending throughout the whole United States. They should be properly organized, and conducted with good sense and good temper, each respecting the rights of the other. Thus they naturally become checks and guards to each other against the abuse of political power. They bring into discussion before the people the justice of all questions which underlie their institutions and welfare, and in this way become the conservators of civil liberty.

Therefore we would not, as we had the power, annihilate the Democratic Party, but in the present unsettled condition of our rights, we appeal to every friend of justice and lovers of equality to unite with us in support of the men and the party who have taught us, by their past deeds, as well as present promises, that they regard the rights of men as paramount to party prejudices and political preferences.

We, as colored men, and as citizens, to whom the 14th Amendment has vouchsafed all the political privileges we enjoy, and as men who support great principles, rather than the private prejudices of disinfranchised politicians, feel constrained by the principles of gratitude, political policy and even-handed justice to support for the Chief Magistracy of this nation, Ulysses S. Grant, and associate with him, Henry Wilson, of Massachusetts.

We indorse and approve the Administration of President Grant, and have full faith in his integrity, justice and practical statesmanship. His course during his entire Administration has been such as to lead us to regard him as a true exponent of the equal rights of all men. We have not forgotten the stand you made in the Senate, in regard to the indignity passed upon our worthy friend and brother, Frederick Douglass, while on board the mail steamer on the Potomac in company with the San Domingo Commissioners, as truly far fetched. Especially do we so regard it when we find you in such a short time, in such intimate relations with the political alliances with the very men who defeated your bill in Congress, which, if passed and carried into effect, would have thoroughly prevented such indignities, not only toward our worthy fellow-citizen on the particular occasion referred to, but on all other occasions, as they are perpetrated nightly and daily by the identical men you tell us have "changed."

Honored Sir, for many years we have regarded you as a true exponent of the principles of liberty, equal rights and free government, and such an impression has your teachings made upon our minds that now we choose rather to follow those noble principles you have hitherto taught us than to follow you into the rank and file of the Democratic Party.

You uttered the precise sentiment of every intelligent and unbiased colored man, North or South, when you said in one of your famous speeches on reconstruction: "It will not do to trust the rebel politically."

As colored citizens of the South we speak what we know when we say to you, that for us to follow your advice, and support the so-called Liberal Republican nominees for President and Vice-President in the coming campaign, would be to imperil every right secured to us as the legitimate results of the war.

Therefore, Mr. Sumner, in parting company politically, we say to you in reference to your newly-espoused associates, in the language of Shakespeare:

Thou smiliest and hold a serpent by the tongue,
A smiling lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting tiger at the full mouth,
As hollow as friendship like the hand which then dost hold.

Sincerely yours,
SAMUEL LOWERY, Chairman.
MOSES R. JOHNSON, T. J. BELL, D. L. LAPSLEY, } Secretaries.

The War Rollins "Went For" Horace.

Hon. E. H. Rollins resigned his position of Chairman of the Republican Committee in New-Hampshire. Forthwith the New-York Tribune proclaims this as evidence that Mr. Rollins had left the Republican Party, and was, of course, going for Horace. Now hear Mr. Rollins in that regard:

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 7, 1872.

To the Members of the Republican State Committee:

GENTLEMEN: On account of pressing business duties, which have arisen since my election as Chairman of the Committee in January last, and which I could not have foreseen upon the acceptance of the position, but which will prevent me from giving that time and attention to the work of the Presidential campaign which its importance demands, I am compelled to ask you to accept my resignation (so often tendered) as your Chairman.

While doing this, I am happy to congratulate the Committee upon the union and harmony that prevails in the Republican Party throughout the State. One overwhelming victory in March last, and the united front which we now present to the enemy whom we have fought and defeated in twenty campaigns, render certain a complete triumph in November, over the motley forces marshaled under the leadership of Greeley and Brown, and the emphatic indorsement by the Granite State of President Grant and that self-made man of New-Hampshire, Henry Wilson.

To such a consummation, I shall, in common with you, as my personal friends of the Committee, look forward with profound satisfaction. Yours truly,
E. H. ROLLINS.

Mr. Rollins made a speech at Portsmouth since the date of the above, in which he "went for" Horace quite large.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Republican Meeting in Brooklyn.

The Democratic and Liberal Republicans of Ward [illegible] held a meeting last evening at the Town Hall. The meeting was called to order by Hon. Clarkson N. Potter, and after a short address permanent officers were elected. Resolutions indorsing Greeley, Brown, and the Cincinnati platform were then adopted. Addresses were delivered by the newly-elected President, Mr. Thomas R. Fisher, Hon. C. C. Clarke, of the Tract Press, and Colonel W. Emmet, of New-York, after which the meeting adjourned.

Westchester County Politics.

The Republicans of the town of East Chester held a meeting at Mount Vernon on Wednesday evening, and elected Messrs. E. A. Smith, Wm. P. Satterbrook, G. W. Seaff, Thomas Little, W. H. H. Barlow, and Caleb Reynolds delegates to the Second Assembly District Convention, called to select delegates to the State Convention. The following named gentlemen were chosen delegates to the County Convention, viz.: J. W. Olney, H. P. Curtis, W. H. H. Barker, Wm. P. Sleight, W. H. Van Arsdale and R. E. Smith.

A Plenty Implement.

A correspondent writes: "Returning from the excursion picnic of Hacken Lodge No. 487, F. and A. M., on Tuesday evening, some enthusiastic office-seeker proposed three cheers for Horace Greeley, which was received with groans and hisses. A young man standing near by immediately proposed three cheers for Gen. Grant, which was responded to with a manifestation of applause that would put in the shade all the three-and-twenty-four votes ever taken by the twenty-third congressional district."

Another Friend.

The San Francisco Chronicle notices the appearance in an evening paper of that city, of a call for printers to meet and form a Greeley Club. The Chronicle says the call is signed by 176 men, who call themselves printers. The list presents rather a curious showing. A number of the names belong to men who, if they ever worked at the trade in this State, nobody knows it. Many of them are brokers, politicians, clerks, office-holders, and, indeed, everything but type-setters. There are, also, the names of boys, and other irresponsible persons, and in fact, the whole list looks as if it was completed for the purpose which labor expended in procuring names to be appended to it.

A Greeley Sample.

"A Greeley and Brown club of 400 members was organized at Jordan, on the 8th inst." So it is announced in the Democratic organs. We suppose that may be taken as a sample of the Greeley club formations all over. Jordan is in the town of Elbridge, Onondaga County, where just five Greeley Republicans had been hunted out a fortnight ago, and forty-five or fifty Democrats had been found to forswear the Greeley alliance. The town always gave a small Democratic majority during the war, being the only one in the county, repeatedly to elect a Democratic Supervisor. Those 400 members of an imaginary Greeley and Wilson club, at Jordan, are Democrats pure and simple, who would have rallied with equal alacrity for Jeff. Davis, or any other candidate that might have been nominated at Baltimore. They go for the Democratic candidate, as they have always done—they vote a straight ticket.

The Pledged Alliance.

Augustus Schell, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee; Senator James R. Doolittle, Ethan Allen, Chairman of the Liberal Republican Committee, and Gen. N. P. Banks, held a secret conference Wednesday, at the Democratic head-quarters, Spinzler House. The conference was called to arrange the campaign by which both parties could co-operate. The subject of a Liberal State Convention, to be held at the same time (Sept. 4) and in the same place as the Democratic State Convention, it is understood, was discussed. Arrangements for speakers from both parties for the canvass in Maine and Vermont have been made. Carl Schurz, Gen. N. P. Banks, Mr. Doolittle, and, probably, Charles Sumner will speak in those States, as will also the colored man, William Saunders.

A "Liberal" Defined.

Commenting upon the so-called Liberal movement, the Illinois State Journal says: "We do not propose, in dealing with party names, to call any man a 'Conservative' or a 'Liberal Republican.' We know something about the word 'conservative.' In the Southern States, where they say 'the Conservative-Democratic Party'—the first half of the term means the unrepentant, bitter rebels; the second applies to the carpet-baggers, who have joined them in their effort to overthrow the Union cause. When Liberal Republicans talk of being the men who are ready to be liberal to rebels and public enemies, who would bail Jeff. Davis and hang Toombs and Stephens into Congress, pension rebel soldiers and give over the control of the Government to those who tried to destroy it? A Conservative is a rebel—a Liberal is one who offers to do the dirty work of rebels."

Nineteenth Assembly District Republicans.

A regular meeting of the Nineteenth Assembly District Republican Association was held on Thursday night, at the corner of Eighty-fourth-street and Eighth-avenue, with David Clarke Chairman and Charles F. Bruder Secretary. The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That with its ranks purged of its disaffected elements, the Republican Party proceed with unshakeable faith in the righteousness of its irrevocable principles, and lead on to victory.

Resolved, That the Republicans of the Nineteenth Assembly District heartily indorse the nomination of the patriot soldier, the statesman, the champion of peace—U. S. Grant, and skilled counselor and director in the nation's severest ordeal, Henry Wilson, for the office of Vice-President; and that we pledge ourselves to every honorable effort to secure the accomplishment of the consecration of honors to the peace, the maintenance of the national honor and the continued prosperity of the Republic.

It was announced at the meeting that the young men of the Nineteenth Assembly District have organized a Young Men's Grant and Wilson Club, with head-quarters at Keller's Hotel, Tenth-avenue, between Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth streets. The following delegates were nominated, to represent the district in Convention at Utica: Joseph Cudlipp and Andrew Bleakley; Alternates, B. A. Linden and Tuse Hagan.

President Grant Interviewed by the Mayor of Troy.

The Auburn Advertiser reports that Carroll, the Democratic Mayor of the city of Troy, went to Burlington last week to meet the Presidents and attend him therefrom to Troy; and that Mayor Carroll says that upon one occasion he asked the President if it never occurred to him that his case now was similar to that of Gen. Jackson; that the President evaded and turned the conversation by stating that his father was a friend of, and stump speaker for Jackson; that having been reared a Democrat his predilections were for that party; that since he entered the army he felt excused from taking any active part in politics. In response to a remark of Mayor Dodge, of Burlington, that he might safely judge from the manifestations visible, that Vermont was tolerably exempt from the Greeley fever, the President said that he had received the impression that the country as well as Vermont would not be led away by Greeley or any one else from what now seemed to be the settled policy of the country. After some conversation upon the question whether the issue in New-York just now was a fight for Tammany or a struggle for the Presidency, or more of one than the other, he says he (the President) said he believed the efforts of such men as Tilden, O'Conor, Havemeyer, Dix, Green and Ottendorfer were elevated above all mere party or partisan considerations. Mayor Carroll concludes that Grant is another Silas Wright.

Greeley's Deliberate Opinions.

Hon. B. F. Parks, a life-long Democrat of Illinois, whose influence has always been great in his party, made a stirring speech at Quincy, in that State, on Tuesday night last, denouncing the base notion of the Baltimore Convention, and reiterating his determination to support Grant and Wilson. We quote one paragraph from his speech that is worthy of frequent reflection. He said: "There is only one man north of Mason and Dixon's line of any party or shade of political conviction, that represented masses of opinion, who spoke for secession, and that man was Horace Greeley. There is not another man in America besides Horace Greeley but would say that God would have that utterance blotted out and ashamed from the recollections of his fellow-citizens. It astonished everybody; it was one of those kind of utterances that there is not a public man but would be glad to have buried. But years afterward Horace Greeley takes it from the rubbish of that panicky and revolutionary period, and after the war is over he deliberately writes it down in his history of the rebellion. In the Summer of 1864 we were in the midst of another political crisis. The ablest man, in the best of debate, occasionally indulge in utterances which afterward they would be glad to have bartered from the memories of their hearers. This during the time when efforts were being made between Mr. Greeley and Mr. Sanders for a settlement of our differences, Mr. Greeley writes a letter to President Lincoln. The amnesty part of it, strange as it may appear, is almost word for word, and syllable for syllable, the same as the amnesty plank of the Cincinnati concern. But there was another thing. He recommended Mr. Lincoln to pay $400,000,000 as compensation for the negroes. It is an utterance that not a Northern statesman but would have wished to have banished from the minds of men. Ten years afterward he takes it from the dusty records of that armed period, and writes it down in his book. You have secession acknowledged and preserved as a principle; you have compensation and pay for the negroes also preserved, set down as a principle."

GENERAL NOTES.

Col. John S. Mosby is to speak for Grant and Wilson at Warrenton, Va., next Monday.

W. H. H. Posey, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, refuses to accept the "Liberal" nomination for Congress in that district.

The Boston Advertiser believes that if the election were held now Grant would have 100,000 majority in Massachusetts.

Grace Brown writes that all he did at New-Haven was to apply a stimulant for temporary relief from illness.

Mr. John Harmer Gilmer made a speech at Alexandria, Va., Monday night, in favor of the re-election of President Grant.

Hon. John Allison, of Pennsylvania, is to make several speeches in Kentucky this month, in advocacy of the re-election of President Grant.

The Elizabeth (N. J.) Monitor denies the Tribune's story that its compositor Gormly; The Monitor says that it has always been on the side of Grant.

Carlos W. Wright, the Democratic candidate for Congress in Delaware, belongs to the Gov. Salisbury wing of the party. He is not in robust health.

The Grant and Wilson Club of Jackson, Mich., was formally organized on Thursday evening. Hon. Austin Blair will speak in that city this evening.

The Straight-out Democrats of the Maine Fifth District are much dissatisfied with F. A. Pike as a candidate for Congress, and threaten to run Gen. Frank Nickerson, of Scarsport.

The Boston correspondent of the Springfield Republican believes the re-election of Gov. Washburn, of Massachusetts, sure, and thinks it doubtful if all the elements of the Liberal Party can be united on any one candidate for that office.

After a careful investigation the Maine correspondent of the Boston Journal says that there is every reason to be sure that the Republicans will make a clean sweep of the State, and that it is not improbable that for the first time they will carry every county.

The Portland (Me.) Press says there is not a word of truth in the Greeley organs' story that Ex-Gov. A. P. Morrill, of that State, had written a letter to Gen. Banks, giving a rose-colored view of Greeley prospects in Maine. Mr. Morrill is an ardent Grant man, and recently made an effective speech at Augusta.

ULSTER COUNTY.

Formation of a Grant and Wilson Club in Kingston—Speech by Senator Conkling.

From Our Own Correspondent.

KINGSTON, Wednesday, Aug. 14, 1872.

A large and enthusiastic meeting was held at Music Hall, in this city, last evening, in the interest of Grant and Wilson. The rain, which fell in torrents from 7 till 8 o'clock, did not prevent the people from turning out in large numbers. Outside the hall a lot of lively young men manned the "peace-maker," and fired one hundred guns, waking the echoes round about in fine style. Inside the hall, Burger's Band furnished patriotic music, and kept the large audience in good humor until the meeting was formally organized, Mr. William M. Hayes called the meeting to order and nominated Thomas E. Johnson for temporary Chairman, and A. T. Clearwater temporary Secretary. A Committee on Permanent Organization was then appointed, who retired and soon returned with the following report:

Resolved, That this organization be known as the Grant and Wilson Club of the Second District of the County of Ulster. That the officers be as follows: Eliaha W. Brigham, Vice-President, Jacob Burhans, Jr., Chas. D. Bruyn, John S. Burhans, et al.

The President, Mr. Brigham, took the chair, and in a few words thanked the meeting for the honor conferred upon him, and expressed his hope for the success of the cause.

Dr. Ketchum, of New-York, was then introduced and pronounced the well-merited eulogy of Senator Conkling, who was detained by a late train and did not reach the hall until 8:30 o'clock.

Senator Conkling was introduced by United States Marshal George H. Sharpe, and was received with round after round of applause. The Senator spoke at great length, occupying the same until 11 o'clock. His speech was an eloquent defense of the Administration in all its policies, foreign and domestic, and stern denunciation of those who had proved recreant to the faith of the Republican Party. The speech was a condensation of his great address in New-York. Senator Conkling left this city this morning for Glens's Falls, where he is to deliver a speech this evening.

WEST PENNSYLVANIA.

Enthusiastic Grant Meeting—Addresses by Distinguished Speakers.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 15.—Notwithstanding the threatening weather another monster Republican mass-meeting was held in Diamond-square, Allegheny City. The speaker's stand was tastefully decorated with flags and Chinese lanterns and appropriate mottoes.

The Grant and Hartranft marching clubs of this city and Allegheny, all uniformed, turned out to escort the speaker of the evening, Hon. Selucius Garfield, Member of Congress from Washington Territory, from this city to Allegheny City.

The greatest enthusiasm was manifested. Mr. Garfield spoke for one hour and a half, and his speech, as a whole, was a master-piece of eloquence. It embodied not only solid truths for our people to meditate upon, but also much information that had doubtless the effect of convincing many of the speaker's hearers of the great folly they would commit if they threw their ballots away for the Democratic candidates as his approbation election.

At the conclusion of his speech, he was heartily cheered, and was followed by Gen. Negley, our Representative in Congress, who was listened to with marked attention. The campaign in Western Pennsylvania is very warm at present, and in a week or two it will be at fever heat.

The German Lager-Beer Retailers.

A number of German lager-beer saloon-keepers, Christian Schmitt presiding, held a meeting at the Bowery Garden, yesterday, for the purpose of forming a central organization for the protection of the lager-beer trade against the re-enforcement of the Sunday clause of the Excise law, and to secure the passage of a law by the Legislature to compel brewers to furnish full measure. The meeting was composed of delegates of the several districts of organizations, formed a few days since, but only a limited number of districts were represented.

A committee of five, formed at a previous meeting to wait upon the Excise Commissioners in reference to the Sunday question, reported that no official interview had been had with the Commissioners, but from the conference, they had been informed that no arrests or prosecutions for alleged violations of the law on the part of lager-beer retailers shall be authorized so long as the question as to whether this law is applicable to the sale of lager remains undecided.

Peach Shipments.

From the Wilmington (Del.) Commercial, Aug. 14.

The peach shipments for the week ending Aug. 13, show a heavy increase over the week previous. Still they are not coming forward in quantities near equal to what they were this time last year—the season is several weeks later. Last year, the regular peach train was put upon the Delaware Railroad on the 12th of July, at least three weeks earlier. We find, by a comparison of the record then kept, that for the corresponding week of 1871, 2,197 cars had been shipped, against 812 in 1872. The following are the shipments for the week:

	Carloads.	Baskets.	Pounds.
To Jersey City	41	320,000	7,400,000
To Philadelphia	42	22,000	720,000
Previous shipments	324	192,000	4,564,000
Total	407	488,000	12,684,000

The Labor Convention to be Held at Philadelphia Aug. 22.

BOSTON, Aug. 16.—In connection with the Labor Convention to be held at Philadelphia, Mr. E. M. Chamberlin, Chairman of the New-York Conference, states that it was the first intention of the New-York Conference to have the National Executive Committee call the Convention, but that is now appearing that those of that Committee who have not left the party are in favor of meeting at Philadelphia, and that a call issued by Mr. Pease was without due authority and invalid. Mr. Chamberlin has revoked his postponement and requested the delegates to be sent to Philadelphia Aug. 22, as ordered by the New-York Conference, and published in his call.

Funeral of Commodore Macomb.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 16.—The funeral of Commodore William H. Macomb took place yesterday afternoon, and was attended by a large number of naval and military officers.

AN ENGLISH MONARCH.

The Crown of Scilly—A Sketch of its Wearer.

From the Pall Mall Gazette.

Many a cursory reader will have paused for a moment in his rapid survey of the news of the day when his eye lighted on the announcement of the death of Mr. Augustus Smith—King Augustus, as he was facetiously termed—the owner, or more properly lessee under the Duchy of Cornwall, of the Scilly Islands, with by chance having the nearest nearer than the Land's End on one side of him and Newfoundland on the other. He was, however, well known to the public a few years ago through a more recent time, for he was for many sessions a member of Parliament, and well known for certain legislative crotchets which had obtained possession of his brain, and for the determined pertinacity with which he clamorously urged them. Since the unpretentious, absurdly big, little old gentleman had ceased to return him, he withdrew quietly from public life, and attached himself more and more to the affairs of the little archipelago which he governed and loved. Those who personally knew him will not easily forget his friendly, hospitable, unassuming ways when contrasted in his neighbourhood by the unbending manner with which he received greeting at landing, purchased by the sullenness of forty miles transit over the stormiest section of the Western Atlantic, or the holiday of careless enjoyment and kindly treatment which his visitors enjoyed—the longer the welcome—under the shadow of his roof. Such tages are matters only to be touched on by journalists; our concern is rather with some singular points in his position and career which made them a subject of public interest, diminutive as his theatre in modern times may be.

He had, no doubt, certain advantages for exercise of a paternal landlord, so to speak, which few could possess to the same extent with himself. He was a wealthy man, possessing independent resources far more ample than any which his islands could afford; and he was all his life a bachelor, without any extravagant prodigality or reason for accumulation. He had, therefore, no temptation to make the most of his tenants' domain in a pecuniary way. We have no doubt (though speaking without information on this point) that he received rent from them were much more than covered by his outlay. But, though this exempt from all tendency to put on the screw for his own sake, he was by no means one of those easy-going proprietors who yield to every demand through timidity or love of popularity. They are, perhaps, at least, as bad two experiences of the real benefaction of his opposition and scrutiny of his political economy—estimated him a "hard man." He could make his regulations obeyed, generally speaking, through the simple process of notice to quit. The law itself—though we have never heard of his absurd it—was to a certain extent in his power, as the Court of twelve inhabitants which decided on small civil questions was unmanageable, and its members eligible, by himself as lessee of the Duchy. And to these regulations he exacted implicit obedience, even when they involved (as they did in one case) the complete ruin of an island, and its convertion into a deer park. He took abundant care that no hardship should be inflicted, and that the few dispossessed cottiers should be the better for the change. But he was not a man to brook resistance where satisfied that he was in the right. It is well remembered that he was in fact greatly in the habit of taking up the cause of certain fellow-commoners of his in a Hertfordshire parish, he quietly collected and sent down from London a gang of two of navvies, who tore up in the most peaceful manner imaginable the palings which a neighboring lord had erected in defiance of what he Mr. Smith deemed the commoners' rights. Being asked why he employed nothing like a small army to institute a legal claim, his only answer was, "Because I was afraid there might be opposition, and therefore anxious to carry the matter through peacefully." Such being the nature of King Augustus, it is scarcely necessary to add that he was realized in all respects Beranger's Roi d'Yvetot, to whom he has been compared; though in good humor, in easy way of living, in his habit of personalizing the island in which his palace lay as a pony, (he only has there, and, possibly, in a reasonable addiction to the good things of life, he resembled the king, and, perhaps, there by name, he might a little resemble that potentate. But it is more to our purpose to study his political dealings with his people than thus to make free with his character.

If the sea were to rise 1,200 feet on the coasts of Devonshire, leaving nothing of that beautiful country above water except the rounded grassy hills, and a few, the prominent, Dartmoor hills, crowned with their rocky covering of tors and soldiers, a pretty exact repetition of the features of the Scilly Islands would thus be produced. Surrounded by deep seas they are divided by shallow inlets and lagoons, so that twice every day at some periods of tide, from one island to another. The surfaces are rounded, and slopes gentle, but the ubiquitous granite protrudes everywhere in magnificent masses, the rocks of Peninis equal, or even surpass, in that style of grandeur all that the Land's End district of Cornwall has to show. But the decomposed granite bears tolerable crops of corn, excellent ones of vegetables, while the flowers—particularly found that ancient convent ruin of Tresco, where the late proprietor dwelt—surpass, probably, anything which Great Britain can furnish in comparison, and may perhaps be rivaled on the west coast of Ireland, but certainly not exceeded anywhere on this side of the Bay of Biscay. The natives are not of old Celtic race like those of the Hebrides; they form rather (if this may be allowed without provoking the wrath of a "scratch" population. The islands seem to have been almost untenanted—partly from fear of Barbary pirates—until Queen Elizabeth established a fortress there. Then the necessities of trade and pilotage gradually drew people thither from the mainland, and they now somewhat exceed 2,000 in number. Perhaps it is this recuperative character of the little community which has enabled Mr. Smith to deal with it, for public purposes as he conceived them, more easily than he could have done with a race more rooted in the soil. They are small farmers, fishermen, pilots, with a few traders and retired naval men established in the one little town. Elsewhere other than these his late Majesty had none.

When first he settled there some forty years ago they were an idle race; and it cannot be said, notwithstanding the progress since made, that they are strictly industrious as yet, or disposed to make as much of their (might of their advantages of soil and (though it may sound) of climate. At that time no superintendence had been exercised, and the little holdings were getting indefinitely subdivided. Not only were they growing smaller, but they became scattered, to use a phrase well known in French agriculture, to a degree inconvenient even. The tenants had a dozen or more half little fields scattered from one end to another of his island, separated from each other by bogs and tracts of moving sand. It cost Mr. Smith infinite exertion both of persuasion and authority before he could prevail on them, by means of exchanges, to make arrangements, to bring their little holdings within the compass of convenience, to the infinite saving of labor. This accomplished, he removed the few families which occupied some of the poorest outlying islets altogether from their tenements, and brought them into better neighbourhoods. On some of these the scanty resident householders—above mentioned—had settled out of their own inclination, it is said, degenerated into a condition approaching that of imbecility.

It was to a population thus economically distributed, so to speak, that Mr. Smith promulgated his land laws. In the matter of rent he could afford to be generous. In the matter of tenure conditions were imposed which seemed to be for the general advantage. He was unyielding. Smuggling and wrecking were kept under by strict process of elimination. Sub-lettings, and even the taking in of lodgers, were severely repressed; and it was on these points that the landlord's code naturally met with much opposition. The most unpopular enactment of the statutes was "Thou shalt send thy children to school." He took steady care that education should be general, and that it should be good. And he had his reward. He used to say himself that he personally knew forty masters of trading vessels who had received their elementary education in that little school. The island's history was almost uniformly a Scilly lad taken into the merchant service was certain to rise if sober and steady through the usefulness which his education produced. Spiritual as well as scholastic management was taken into his royal hands. He selected and paid a small staff of resident clergymen. But on these subjects, at least, he was well contented that every one should go his own way—only the "upper hundred" or so of his subjects went to church; the respectability was Wesleyan; the poorer class, we believe, Bryanite; but neither these institutions were little known among them. Such was the monarchy of Augustus I., probably the only one of his dynasty; for (not knowing ourselves into what collateral and his scepter may fall) we can hardly expect that another will arise so fond of banishment as to seclude himself in that lonely chateau at Tresco, or so anxious to the good and to the inhabitants as to make it his chosen occupation to live among them and superintend their affairs, and, in addition, possessing Mr. Smith's consistency of princip

MOUNT WASHINGTON.

The One-Hoss—Rival Lines—Crowding Among Tourists—Scenes Taken to the Mountains.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

MOUNT WASHINGTON, Wednesday, Aug. 14, 1873.

It rains here three weeks at a time. None of your drizzling, misty, dawy rains, but a genuine storm, that comes down as if it loves us, and had plenty of water to carry on the business. A coquettish thing is Mount Washington. Now you see it, and now you don't. Its lordly head is covered with a thin vapor of cloud, which lifts occasionally, but generally hangs like a bridal veil, to the great disgust of visitors. Everybody goes up the mountain, and stage-load after stage-load are dragged up the dreary, breakneck way, seeing nothing on the passage and nothing on the summit, in nine cases out of ten, but mainly getting a thorough drenching, while the prospect does not extend a foot in the mist-obscure. It is the fashion to go up the mountain, and as it costs $6 for each passenger and the hotel man run the stages—every visitor is pressed to make the ascent.

RIVAL LINES.

Mount Washington is sent to advantage from various points. The Summer travel drifts toward these highlands. The greatest rivaling estate among railroad men, and hotel-keepers to turn the tide to their account. For a long time the Lowell and Concord lines held the monopoly of this profitable business.

The Maine Road cut in to the Concord by Dover and the latest. More recently the Eastern Road has come in for more than the lion's share. By a union with the Grand Trunk, passengers are conveyed to Gorham, and are landed eight miles from Mount Washington. By a new line of road, called by the attractive name of the "Sea Shore line," passengers are taken to Conway, and thence by stages to the mountains. At Conway, passengers are taken either to the Glen House or the Crawford House, according to their fancy, or the eloquence of the agents of the different lines. Each prides its own particular portion of the mountain and runs down that of its rival. Twenty-eight or thirty miles of staging over one of the worst roads ever traveled is tedious beyond expression. As to the choice of roads the matter is like the high-ways out West—"if you take the one you will wish you had taken the other." As to seeing the mountains there is very little choice. The fare is heavy on the stages, and the extortion is varied and abundant. The railroad on Mount Washington, two miles long, is to be crowned with a fine hotel, to be owned by the corporation.

GREELEY AMONG THE MOUNTAINS.

Mr. Greeley has been swinging round the circle in imitation of Andy Johnson. The hotel men were quite willing to accept the gratuitous advertising this visit gave to their region. The Democrats did their best to make a stir. The photographer brought a company with him conspicuously large to wake up some enthusiasm. The proprietors of the Glen House made an display in flags, buying about a dozen of the size and quality of those usually sold on the Fourth of July for a penny, and stuck these up on the chandeliers, and scrawly mottoes on the piazza. The movement was a very cold one, and the spirit of the farmers may be learned from a conversation on the piazza. "He a Cincinnatus, Cincinnatus was not a fool. He knew how to plow as well as to fight. If he had spent his remote afternoons in chopping off branches of trees, without any or purpose—and not knowing which end of the plow to handle, he settle, boiled his beans before planted them—the people of Rome would have left Cincinnatus to his harmless pastimes, as they will Uncle Horace." The Rhode Island clam-bake, and the ridiculous carrying one, contrasted with the dignity of Gen. Grant's receptions at Utica and the interest of New-York, are doing their work on the people.

SOME THINGS TO BE MENDED.

There are many things on our line of travel that ought to be mended. The insolence and impertinence of those who sell papers and candies on the cars are crying evils. Conversation is interrupted, sleepers are waked up, papers are thrown in the face of unwilling passengers, and from New-York to Boston, and from Boston to the White Hills, boys and half-grown young men insult those who refuse to receive their wares.

But little attention is paid to the comfort of passengers on boats or trains. On Jim Fisk's line, from New-York to Boston, the money of five hundred passengers was taken the other night when it was known that not half that number could be accommodated. The state-rooms were gone before 10 A. M. There were no cots provided. Chairs even could not be had. The few berths offered were in a seething cauldron which reminded one of the Black Hole of Calcutta. Nobody was on duty. Bold men stalked through the ladies' cabin without check or hindrance, and the hands about the boat made night hideous by their profane and unseemly quarrels. A word from the Times on this matter will be heeded. Its timely rebukes of corruption, its humanity to friendless and forsaken outcasts, has given it a potential power in all matters of the public weal. If it shall shame some of our steam-boat men would take the tinsel off of their coats and hats and put on some good manners, it would be a great gain.

GLENN'S FALLS.

The Largest In-Door Meeting Ever Held in Northern New-York.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

GLENN'S FALLS, Thursday, Aug. 14, 1873.

The largest meeting ever held in-doors in this region was held here last night, under the auspices of the Grant and Wilson Club, of Glenn's Falls.

For three hours Senator Conkling held the willing multitude, which packed one of the largest and finest audience-rooms outside the cities. I speak deliberately as to the crowd. Long before the hour appointed for the meeting the Opera-house began to fill, and before 8 o'clock hundreds of chairs had to be brought in from another hall. Aisles and other unseated portions of the hall were filled in, and many went away reluctantly giving up the contest for even standing room. When we add that it was a wet, drizzling, disagreeable night, your readers can judge of the enthusiasm among Republicans here.

The Senator was greeted with loud applause as he entered the hall, and with three rousing cheers when the President of the Club, Ex-Senator R. H. Little introduced him.

To say short stay here I find "in the Narra" is thoroughly in earnest. At Caldwell today I stumbled upon the Republicans in session for the appointment of State and Congressional delegates. Every town but one, a remote one, was represented—something unusual in this county for an August convention. The delegates were enthusiastic and earnest. Two delegates from each town across in convention and stated the outlook and early movements for their respective towns. Every one bore witness to the quiet indifference of large numbers of the better class of Democrats, and of the active opposition to Greeley of many.

Ex-Joseph Weed and Hon. Isaac Maze and Hon. Columbus Gill are delegates to the State Convention.

Capt. M. N. Dickinson, W. A. Tuttle and Andrew Thurston go to the Congressional Convention.

Twentieth Connecticut Volunteers.

The fifth annual reunion of the Twentieth Regiment Connecticut Volunteers will be held in Cheshire, Friday, Aug. 22, 1873. The citizens of Cheshire will provide a free entertainment for the members of the regiment and their ladies. The invitation will include the widows and orphans of all who were members of the regiment. A business meeting of the association will be held at 10 o'clock. Dinner will be ready promptly at 12½ P. M.; after which will be speeches, songs, reminiscences of campaigns, &c.

Close of the August Term of the Court of General Sessions.

The August Term of the Court of General Sessions closed yesterday. Although the Court remained in session but two weeks, 120 serious cases were disposed of. Of these, thirty-five were burglaries, fifteen were cases of garroting, and the remainder consisted of shoplifting, stock-stealing, violent assaults, &c. The following prisoners entered pleas of guilty, and were sentenced yesterday: Samuel Allen, for attempt at burglary, two years and six months in State Prison; George Tetzen and George Kirby, for burglary in the third degree, to four years and nine months in the State Prison; and Thomas Kelly and Charles Robles, two boys, for attempt at burglary, to the Catholic Protectory.

EDWARD S. STOKES.

Complaint of His Counsel About Close and Unhealthy Confinement—What They Urge in Behalf of Their Client.

The following memorial has been forwarded to the Commissioners of Correction by the counsel for Edward S. Stokes, relative to his confinement in the Tombs:

To the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction:

GENTLEMEN: As representatives the counsel of Edward S. Stokes, now confined in the City Prison, I address you in his behalf.

Since January last, as you are aware, he has been confined on the charge of murder. For the first two months of his incarceration—during the time that Hagerty and Beulich were there—he was, with them, permitted during a portion of each day to take exercise in the Prison-yard. Since then, with the exception of the walk permitted around the corridor of his hall, he has been, as we are informed, kept in close confinement. Although of naturally strong constitution, this lengthened imprisonment alone would be apt to tell upon him. He has been accustomed all his life to out-door exercise, and under the most favorable circumstances would feel the loss of it. But to loss of exercise is added the misery of unhealthy quarters. His cell is little better than a tomb. The dampness of it is so great as to cause the paper on the wall and his clothing in the cell to mildew. As we are informed by Dr. James R. Wood, who is his attending physician, due to sulphur in surface admixture of sulphur and bronchitis, and, as is stated in the letters which accompany this petition, he is now seriously affected by these joint diseases. The severity of the attack is attributed, as you will observe, to the unhealthy condition of his cell. Were it not for the fact that it is at present imperatively necessary that his counsel should hold frequent and sometimes immediate interviews with Mr. Stokes, his condition would, perhaps, warrant us in asking the transfer to the hospital; but our own engagements will not admit of his being located at such a distance from us. We respectfully ask that he may be permitted to convey, once or twice at least, one of the larger cells in what we understand is known as the boys' department. One man at least has been there confined within a few months, and I am authorized to say that, if any additional expense should be incurred in employing an other keeper to watch him, that such expense will willingly be defrayed by his friends. We beg you to remember that he is only charged with crime—not convicted—and for humanity's sake alone, we trust you will consider it proper to grant the request. Respectfully,

JOHN D. TOWNSEND, of Counsel.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 5, 1873.

P. S. Since writing the above, I have received a letter from Mr. Tremain, which I annex here to.

OLD ORCHARD BEACH, SACO, Me.

GENTLEMEN: It is represented to me that Mr. Stokes is suffering from bronchitis and has been here advised to remove from the dampness of his cell, and that there are far better cells, or rather, square rooms in the City Prison. As counsel for him, and in the interests of the cause of humanity, I address to you this request—that you would make arrangements to give him a more comfortable place of confinement. Yours, VERY TRULY, LYMAN TREMAIN.

To the Commissioners of Charity of New-York To the Commissioners of Charities and Correction:

GENTLEMEN: I have been requested by the counsel of Edward S. Stokes, now confined in the City Prison, to visit him for the purpose of examining him professionally.

I have done so, and find that he is suffering from bronchitis and asthma severely, and recommend that he be removed to a dry cell, the present one being damp to an extent to produce mold upon the wall-paper and articles of clothing in the cell.

I have been family physician of Stokes and his ancestors for twenty years. I do not believe that it is safe for life to be longer continued in his present quarters.

Very respectfully, JAMES R. WOOD.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 5, 1873. No. 80 Irving-place.

I concur in the opinion expressed by Dr. Wood, and in the recommendation contained in his letter. Mr. Stokes's present quarters are damp and unhealthy. H. R. SANDS, M. D.

AUG. 5, 1873.

This is to certify that I, the undersigned, have this day visited Mr. E. S. Stokes, confined in the City Prison, and find him suffering as described by Dr. J. R. Wood, and I cheerfully indorse his opinion in every particular. Mr. Stokes' health is at present much impaired as 24 require different treatment at once.

Very respectfully, E. BRADLEY, M. D.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 6, 1873.

OBITUARY.

Jesse Olney.

Olney's Geography, which appeared in 1828, forty-four years ago, was so wonderfully successful as a school-book, and such an improvement on the prevailing systems of geographical science, that it entirely changed the method of all succeeding geographies. There are few men now between the ages of thirty-five and fifty-five who did not study the book in their youth, and to whom, ever since, the name of Mr. Olney has not brought an association of their school-days; and not one of them heard without regret that Jesse Olney, after a life of varied usefulness, died at his home in Stratford, Conn., July 31, in the seventy-fourth year of his age. Few ever came within his influence but felt a tender veneration for the man, for so many different qualities were combined in his character, that every candid nature meeting his at once struck a chord of sympathy. He was social, sensitive, interested in life and in people of all ages and classes, and a delightful talker. He had traveled extensively on this continent, and at three different epochs of his life made an extended tour in Europe. His was devoted to books, and thoroughly with the best thoughts of the greatest writers, and his daily readings always embraced pages from Spencer, Buckle or other eminent apostles of a great system of philosophy.

He was, from about 1828, a prominent politician in his own State, and was widely known as a staunch Democratic leader. He possessed too broad views and too logical a mind ever to be an illiberal partisan. Also, from his practical interest in popular education, he was devoted to the interests of schools, and the excellent common schools of Connecticut have much to thank him for in the way of efficient service rendered their cause. He was, at least, its most powerful prop and pillar.

Chicago Churches and Theatres.

The Chicago Interior, a religious journal, in its issue for the present week, says:

"It is a somewhat significant fact that the proprietors of the various places of amusement and dissipation in this city have far outstripped the various Church societies in rebuilding. Gardner's Academy of Music was built from foundation in Midsummer, and was equipped and opened within ninety days after the first stone was laid. McVicker's Theatre, is as publicly announced, will be reopened this evening. The building and furnishing of a theatre is a work of some magnitude, requiring an outlay of money and time amply sufficient for the construction of a church. We should, therefore, expect to notice similar progress on the part of religious societies in repairing their losses; but the fact is that not one church edifice of any pretensions has been completed, and a number of foundations have been laid, and in some cases work has been commenced on the superstructures, but there is no probability that any of the numerous houses of worship now in process of construction will be completed before the beginning of the new year."

The American Institute Fair.

The Empire Rink was thrown open, yesterday, for the reception of the heavy machinery to be exhibited at the American Institute Fair, the time being thus afforded for the adjustment in working order of the more cumbrous articles. The managers of the Fair state that the applications for trade fair year have been more numerous than ever before, and it is expected that the Fair will be the most extensive ever held by the Institute.

The McGlynn Lunacy Case.

The friends of Mrs. McGlynn, in whose case a commission had been appointed to determine her soundness of mind, desire it to be understood that the lady or her friends did not assent to an adjournment of the case when it was to have been heard before a Sheriff's Jury and the Commissioner, a few days since. On the contrary, the friends of this estimable lady claim that she is anxious to meet an investigation of assertions alleged to be groundless, and that the proceedings were instituted only for the purpose of obtaining control of her property.

The Journeymen Tailors.

The International Society of Journeymen Tailors yesterday elected the following officers: Jacob Morstold, of this City, President; James Robinson, of Syracuse, Vice-President; S. C. Hornendobler, of Philadelphia, Secretary, and John X. Welsh, of this City, Treasurer. William Ketter, of Washington, D. C., and Luther Swanks, of Norfolk, Va., were chosen Trustees. The Convention then adjourned to meet next year in Norfolk, Va., on the second Monday in August.

SECOND BOARD.

[illegible]

FRIDAY, Aug. 15—P. M.

The upward reaction in Gold noticed at the close of business yesterday was supported by the Bull clique of the Gold Room today at 115⅛@115⅜ ₱ cent. They took all the Gold offered at or within this quotation, and some of the Bankers in the Foreign Exchanges advanced their drawing rates on London 1/2 ₱ cent. in consequence of the stiffness in Gold. The effect of this movement, however, was to limit the dealings in Bills for Saturday's steamer, and the rates paid, as a rule, were 108⅞ ₱ cent. 60 days and 109⅞ ₱ cent. on demand. The advanced rates are 108⅞ ₱ cent. and 109⅞ ₱ cent. respectively. The effect of the rise in Gold on the general Stock market, which was adversely felt last evening, was less marked today, but a further decline in Erie on the London quotations created a somewhat dull and depressed feeling on the other Roads, and also on Western Telegraph and Pacific Mail. The dullness of the market was more conspicuous than the difference from yesterday in prices. After the late Board the following quotations were made as compared with Wednesday afternoon. The Public Funds were comparatively steady, with only a limited amount of Stock offered. In the Railway Mortgages and Southern State Bonds only a light business was done, and no signs of speculative interest appear in either department of the Exchange list. The price of Money to the Brokers is 3@4 ₱ cent. on call loan, and 5@6 ₱ cent. on loans running on specified time.

At the very close of the Exchange, at 4 o'clock P. M., the general market was unsettled.

After most of the Brokers had made up their Bank accounts, the Bull clique in Gold, who are supposed to be identical with the Bearish party in Stocks, bid up the price of Money to 5@6 ₱ cent. And this incident, on the Street corners, after regular Bank hours, was used on the Exchange to affect the market for the Railroads and other Stocks. This sort of game, which should by this time be altogether transparent to the Street, is so frequently used with temporary success that we are inclined to concur with a correspondent who intimates that if the New-York and Western Stocks have any friends left in Wall-street, they must be most deplorably wanting in self-respect, or pluck, to suffer the notorious Erie scamps to control the market in this fashion. In proof of this opinion the pertinent inquiry is suggested as to why a rise or fall of 1@1 ₱ cent. in Gold, manipulated by these people, should either alarm or stimulate the Stock Exchange.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

INVESTMENTS.

The Large Sales of Northern Pacific 7-30 Gold Bonds show their popularity with investors, and we recommend them to the public because of their ABSOLUTE SAFETY, both as a first-class Railroad Security, and a Real Estate Mortgage on Lands worth twice the amount of the proposed Loan.

The Bonds have thirty years to run—payable, principal and interest, in Gold—exempt from United States Tax to the Holder—are a first and only mortgage on the Road and its earnings, and upon a Government Grant of Land averaging on completion of the Road about 20,000 acres per mile of track.

Believing that these Bonds, both in point of safety and profitableness, constitute such a security as judicious investors can approve, we recommend them to the public. Government Bonds and all marketable securities received in exchange at current quotations, without cost to the investor.

JAY COOKE & CO.,

New-York, Philadelphia and Washington

☞ ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY'S FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS

Are being absorbed by an increasing demand for them.

Besides being the obligation of a wealthy corporation, composed of men of experience and high-toned commercial integrity, they are secured by a first mortgage on the road, revenues, land grant, franchise and equipments, combined in one mortgage, and are readily negotiable both in the markets of this country and Europe.

A liberal sinking fund provided in the mortgage deed must advance the price upon the closing of the loan. Principal and interest payable in GOLD. Interest at eight (8 p. c.) per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, free of tax. Principal in thirty years. Denominations, $1,000, $500 and $100. Coupons or Registered.

Price 97½ and accrued interest in currency, from Feb. 15, 1873.

Maps, circulars, documents and information furnished.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New-York.

The diminished quantity of these Bonds for sale, and the increased demand absorbing them, warrant the belief that they will soon be sought for at an advance considerably above the present subscription price at which they can now be had through the principal banks and bankers throughout the country, and from the undersigned, who unhesitatingly recommend them.

☞ THE GREAT MIDLAND RAILROAD NOW NEARLY COMPLETED.

The remainder of the FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT. GOLD BONDS, limited to $20,000 TO THE MILE on finished Road, offered, to close out the loan, at par and interest.

The New-Jersey Division of the Road is finished, and trains are now running into Jersey City. From Oswego eastward the road is in successful operation for a long distance. A short gap in the construction of the New-York Division alone prevents running through from New-York to Oswego. Work is progressing on this unfinished section with the utmost energy, and we hope soon to announce the completion of the entire road of this great Trunk Line from New-York to Oswego.

These Bonds, in our judgment, possess in a marked degree the elements of

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN SUPPLEMENT.

We beg to announce that the first of a series of CAMPAIGN EDITIONS of the TRIBUNE is now ready. It is printed in large, clear type, and is by far the best document for Republicans issued from the Press.

We desire to call the particular attention of Republicans in all parts of the country to this paper. It has been prepared with the greatest care, and is adapted to readers in every State of the Union. It is issued at a price which barely covers the cost of paper and printing—namely, a cent and a half a copy in quantities of not less than a hundred, or two cents for each single copy.

It contains:—

1. A list of the Tammany supporters and allies of Horace Greeley, with facts proving the alliance between them.

2. A clear and concise statement of the results of Democratic rule in New-York City.

3. A collection of Mr. Greeley's writings and sayings concerning the South and the rebellion—showing how he encouraged the South to secede by telling it that there was no power to compel it to remain in the Union; and how, afterward, he cried out for the extermination of Southerners and the wholesale spoliation of their lands.

4. Jake Thompson's letter.

5. Extracts from speeches of Mr. Colfax and Judge Stanley Matthews.

6. William Lloyd Garrison's very able letter to Senator Sumner—one of the most effective arguments on the Republican side which the campaign has produced.

7. A compact and lucid exhibit of Gen. Grant's Financial, Indian and Foreign policy.

8. A record of Gen. Grant's opinions on all questions of public interest, compiled from his own Messages and other documents—affording a striking contrast to the wild and uncertain crochets of Horace Greeley.

9. A statement of Mr. Greeley's erratic theories on financial questions generally.

10. An interesting sketch of Gen. Grant's achievements during the war, showing the great services he rendered to the country while Mr. Greeley was clamoring for peace at any price.

11. The letters of Gen. Dix and Speaker Blaine.

12. An article exhibiting the effect of Grant's policy on the commercial, ship-building and financial interests of the country.

13. Photographs of Greeley's friends, by Greeley himself, including pictures of Augustus Schell, Belmont, Trumbull, Doolittle, S. S. Cox, Fernando Wood, John Cochrane, Frank Blair, Horatio Seymour, and the Brooks's.

14. A compilation from Mr. Greeley's writings of his opinions of Gen. Grant.

In addition to the above, the paper contains several special articles of great interest and value to all true Republicans, and to honest men of both parties, who regard with disgust the present infamous coalition between the worst slaves of Democrats and renegade Republicans.

We shall print 250,000 copies of this edition to start with. Orders should be forwarded without delay to this office.

Price $1 50 per hundred, or $15 per thousand. Single copies, 3 cents each.

Readers out of the City, desiring one or more copies, can have them mailed direct. Price 4 cents each, including postage.

"FELLOW-CITIZENS! The deposed and partially exiled Tammany Ring has stolen about thirty million dollars from the City of New-York. That was a most gigantic robbery, and buried its contrivers and abettors from power and splendor to impotency and infamy."

This is what Mr. GREELEY said in his speech at Portland, on Wednesday. He omitted to inform his fellow-citizens that while we were bringing the robberies of the Tammany Ring to light, Mr. GREELEY and his paper were denouncing us for being so very personal toward dear TWEED, SWEENY & Co., and calling frantically upon HALL and CONNOLLY to bring actions for libel against us. If Mr. GREELEY had stated this, and expressed his regret for it, he would better have kept up the part of the very "simple" old gentleman which he is now playing.

SAUNDERS, one of the very few colored men whom ETHAN ALLEN has been able to get to shout for GREELEY, was signally rooted at Cooper Institute on Thursday. He went there with great parade to convince the colored people that GREELEY was an angel, and GRANT the ——, something he ought not to be. But the Rev. H. H. GARNETT, a really able colored man, now disposed of SAUNDERS' second-hand "wind-bags" and sophistries, and then SAUNDERS, who had boasted of his power to carry the colored man with him, turned round and said that it was of no consequence, as Mr. GREELEY could carry New-York without black votes. If he thinks he will not carry it with them, SAUNDERS carried his money very badly.

What blundering game the organ of the Democratic candidate is after, in pretending that the suits against TWEED, SWEENY & Co. have been settled for political reasons, no one knows—probably not even the muddled persons who are turning the handle of the organ. But the ideas of the TRIBUNE on truth and fair-dealing are illustrated afresh in its treatment of this subject. The public learnt yesterday, from Attorney-General BARLOW's letter, the real state of affairs. The prosecution is waiting until we can get an honest Judge on the Bench—ALVORD knows that, and hence is trying hard to insure BARNARD's acquittal. But listen to the Attorney-General's statement of the Tribune's share in the transaction:

"A reporter was sent to me last Monday evening from the Tribune to inquire as to these rumors. I made to him in substance the foregoing explanation, but the Tribune saw fit to republish the next morning the statement that these suits had been settled as a part of a political bargain, without saying one word as to my emphatic denial."

This is the kind of fair-play everybody gets in that quarter. Mr. BARLOW may think himself lucky that the Tribune has not "demolished" him by proving that he is in a conspiracy, and swearing that he has been indicted before the Grand Jury for burglary.

Mr. GREELEY made yesterday at Portsmouth, N. H., another of those extraordinary rigmaroles which are presumed to be intended as campaign speeches. From this latest piece of maundering we learn that Mr. GREELEY was better acquainted with the people of New-Hampshire while he was still in his infancy, than he is today, that the Revolutionary struggle was not forgotten thirty years after its termination, and that he retains an undiminished affection for the memory of his aged mother. If Mr. GREELEY's friends like this sort of twaddle, his opponents can have no possible objection to it. It saves, for one thing, a good deal of trouble in collecting illustrations of the folly of a muddle-headed old man, by epitomizing in a very formble way all the varied kinds of silliness of which he has ever been accused. Add to this the advantage of letting the people see the marvelous personal presence of the Tammany candidate, and it may fairly be questioned if Mr. GREELEY could have done half as effectual service to the Philadelphia nominees by taking the stump for them, as he is doing now by acting as his own fugleman.

At the present stage of BARNARD's trial it may be sufficient to remark that public sentiment will be satisfied with no half measures in dealing out sentence. Removal and disqualification from holding office ought to be accepted as the only admissible sequel to BARNARD's offenses against law and public decency. The man who has so befouled the ermine ought to be prevented, in the most conclusive manner, from ever profiting by the revival of the reign of corruption to succeed in wearing it again.

The Republican State Convention.

The Republican State Convention, for the nomination of candidates for the offices of Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Canal Commissioner and State Prison Inspector, will be convened at Utica, on Wednesday next, the 21st. inst. The public look forward with more than ordinary interest to the action of this Convention, independently of its connection with national politics, which is admitted to be of the highest moment, the spirit in which the delegates shall come to the discharge of their responsibilities, the actual choice of candidates, and the bases upon which the suffrages of the people shall be solicited in their behalf, will be found matter for anxious scrutiny, and will go far to furnish a reasonable forecast of the results with which the issues of the pending conflict shall be crowned.

We may say that we look forward with entire confidence to a united and harmonious Convention. For the first time in years, the Republican State Convention, held at Elmira, in May last, to appoint delegates to the Philadelphia Convention, was permitted to transact its business in an orderly spirit. This was due to the absence of those disturbing elements, which have often converted our State Conventions into arenas of rival personal interests, and scenes of unbecoming bickerings, heart-burnings and strife—weakening and scandalizing the only political organization to which the people can appeal for the protection of their interests and the promotion of public morality. Neither Mr. GREELEY nor Mr. FENTON, nor their henchmen, were there with double delegations, conflicting platforms or outside force, to divide and distract. Nor will they be at Utica, fortunately, and hence our ground of belief that the Convention to assemble, like the last one held, will reflect the unanimity of sentiment and honesty of purpose, which now animates the party to be represented there. Such a spectacle of devotion to the common cause of the country, to the Union and Constitution, and to the principle of universal equal rights, will rouse the enthusiasm of the people, and furnish the sure presages of victory.

We have heard comparatively little respecting the names to be brought before the Convention for the offices to be filled, and none, in fact, except for Governor. We regard this as a good sign, if the Convention will act deliberately. Nobody is going to the Convention with a "slate" made up by an unauthorized clique or combination; none go there except to promote the very best objects the occasion demands. Among the names suggested for the highest place on the ticket, there are none offered but those of good men—men of the highest worth and qualifications, who would strengthen the ticket by their personal popularity, and bring the whole party, and much beside, to the polls. We recognize among them the true friends of that reform which is so imperatively demanded, and which cannot be separated from its place as foremost in the list of the great questions of the day. This campaign will have to be carried on, on one side, on the basis of reform, and, while we have no candidate to suggest to the Convention, we earnestly hope that it will choose the very best man it can find, and we will give him a hearty support.

For the office of Canal Commissioner, we improve this opportunity to invoke the most careful consideration of the Convention. It is in the selection of the candidate for this responsible office that the greatest laxity has appeared heretofore. The same members of the Canal Ring have been accustomed to attend the Conventions of both parties, to secure, by mutual efforts and the use of money, when needed, the nominations most desired by them. It is notorious that the corruption existing in that Department of the State Government is no less flagitious and demoralizing than that which has stamped our municipal affairs, or tarnished the good name of the Legislature. We learn, too, that the expenditures on the lines of our internal navigation have been largely multiplied in that spirit of prodigality and lavish outlay that seems only to consult the sordid appetites for plunder of those who cry content only after absorbing all. Upon the Republican Party almost exclusively devolves the duty of driving the thieves who have stolen into power and place from their prey, everywhere to compel them, as far as the laws provide, to disgorge, and to close the doors finally against their profligate practices. To the Republican Party belongs the trial of the experiment of making the canals productive by restoring their revenues to the Treasury. Owing to the extent to which the public works have been pillaged by hungry contractors and unscrupulous officials, they have ceased to sustain themselves, and the people groan under the imposition of heavy taxes to keep them in repair and pay the interest on the public debt. Millions of dollars, out of canal receipts, are annually squandered upon the Rings and their official accomplices. We have noticed, from time to time, in the papers along the canal line, glowing accounts of the improvement in the receipt of tolls during the present season. We say it in all sincerity, that it remains to be seen who will be benefitted by this increase—the people or the vultures who claim it as their spoil.

We beg the Utica Convention to nominate a candidate for Commissioner known to be incorruptible, and not only capable of performing all the duties of his office with industry and fidelity, but also competent and willing to go to the bottom of all frauds which have so impaired the finances of the State and debauched the public administration.

We have only to say again that we look to the Convention with full faith and confidence in its intelligence, patriotism, and discretion. We do not believe it can fail properly to estimate and execute its high commission. While our enemies are wearing the disguise of Reform, let us go honestly about the work, and choose the men most capable of leading it. We do believe it will present to the honest voters of this State a ticket that will deserve and receive their enthusiastic support. We believe that the candidates so to be nominated will be selected for their ability to discharge all the ordinary duties prescribed by the Constitution and the laws, and will also be disposed to co-operate fearlessly and thoroughly in that great work of purification and reform, which must be accomplished ere we lose all trust in the permanency of free institutions. Such a ticket as we anticipate will not only command the suffrages of the people for itself, but will also be found in accordance with the popular sentiment in regard to Gen. GRANT's Administration, so that both will be borne onward to a glorious triumph, and New York will again be restored to her proud pre-eminence at the head of the roll of Republican States. This would be one object for which every good citizen could labor, and one which, if successful, would be hailed with loud applause by the citizens of our sister States, who have witnessed New-York's degradation with sorrow.

Our Southern Foller.

On Saturday evening Senator SCHURZ made an address to the Germans of Chicago on the political situation. Coming, as he had, fresh from a canvassing tour through North Carolina, where, in the excitement of an election, it would be supposed the weakest points of an enemy would be uncovered, we naturally looked to him for some new facts as to the effect of Republicanism upon the South. In this we were happily disappointed; leaving aside the wearisome nonsense about the imperialistic tendencies of the present Administration, and the rehearsal of stale and refuted slanders about corruption, which have from the first formed the entire groundwork of Mr. SCHURZ's speeches, there is little or nothing to excite attention or comment. He says, in a meaningless sort of way, that Gen. GRANT is oppressing the South, though in the same breath he admits that the force of his remarks has been destroyed since the restoration of suffrage by Congress.

At the same hour that Mr. SCHURZ was beguiling his countrymen of Chicago with tiresome platitudes, another address was being delivered a thousand miles away, at Greensboro, N. C., upon the results of Republicanism at the South, by a man thoroughly acquainted with what he was talking about. No one who has read Judge SCHENCK's speech can fail to recognize the earnest truthfulness which underlies all that he says. He is not wanting in local pride, or in honest admiration of his State; but he sees clearly the difficulties that the Administration have had to contend with in the establishment of peace and order throughout that section of the country, and knows from experience that the slight restraints which the Government has been obliged to enforce, and which have been exaggerated by the opposition into tyrannies, were absolutely necessary for the protection of life and property. It will not do for Mr. SCHURZ and his associates to talk in this general way about Federal usurpations. If we were to believe them, the South would be justified in rising to a man in armed opposition to their execution. Yet how silly all this seems when we find that many of the wisest and most reliable statesmen in the Southern States, who from their connection with the rebellion must have felt whatever gall there was in these bonds, advocate and indorse them in the support they give the Republican Party. In good faith we would advise the "Liberals" to adopt some other plea for power, as there is in that one known as "despotism at the South" an inconsistency which would be ridiculous if advocated by any one other than the very illogical body of men now using it.

The French Loan.

Now that the somewhat confusing advices by cable are supplemented by the details found in the European mail files, we can fully understand the jubilation of the French people over the prodigious success of their latest demand for a national loan. The Government asked for seven hundred millions of dollars, and the subscription books at the latest advices showed that there had been applied for some eight and a quarter billions of dollars, or about twelve times the sum required. This result has been accomplished in face of the facts that for the last quarter of a century the annual receipts from French taxation have been regularly in arrears of the expenditures; that since 1870 the national debt of France has increased by about two billions of dollars—i. e., has nearly doubled—and that after months of labor the National Assembly has not yet succeeded in devising taxes sufficient to balance the revenues and expenditures of next year. Of course, part of the amazing volume of the subscriptions has been due to the conviction among banking-houses and others that the amount applied for would be greatly in excess of the sum to be allocated. But even the great European financiers only thought it necessary to bid for four or five times the amount they wanted to cover their contracts, assuming that this would leave margin enough for all possible contingencies. As a consequence of the unlooked-for competition, some of these astute persons have been obliged to make large purchases at greatly enhanced prices to cover the amount of bonds they had undertaken to deliver.

It will thus be seen that the French loan has had more than double the success which the best judges had calculated upon. Whatever way the thing is looked at, it is, as has been remarked, little short of a "financial miracle," and the French people have, very naturally, accepted it as a very substantial testimony to the confidence which the world reposes in their good faith. The shame of crushing defeats is forgotten for a moment in the elation which is aroused by the spectacle of all the Exchanges of Europe struggling for the honor of discounting the paper of "the great nation." For, be it noted, while the subscriptions for all France are about three and a half billions of dollars, those from "foreign countries" exceed four and three-fourths billions of dollars, leaving some distant places still to be heard from. England and Germany are the chief contributors to the latter sum, and it is very evident that the European world of finance has made up its mind that France will not go to war again, in the present century at least. Perhaps this conviction is strengthened by the fact that a huge national debt forms a substantial guarantee for good behavior. For peace purposes, France is not likely to need another loan at all approaching to the dimensions of the one which has been so successfully negotiated. An attempt to borrow for war purposes would, of course, depreciate the value of her outstanding promises to pay, and in sheer self-defense the financial world would meet such a proposal with a point-blank refusal. The same cause will render the hundreds of thousands of Frenchmen of all classes who hold national securities, a permanent phalanx of voters and fighters, if need be, on the side of a régime and a policy of peace. It is some slight compensation, therefore, to set against the injury done to productive investments by a huge financial operation like this, to remember that the latest addition to her national indebtedness renders France still less able than before to plunge Europe into a bloody and costly war.

A Complicated Contest.

In point of darkness and vanity, the ways of the proverbial Chinaman are not to be compared with the tricks and manners of the Central American statesman. This fact has lately been illustrated by the manner in which the war between San Salvador and Honduras has been conducted,—a war which is still in progress, and which will probably last until the next annual revolution in each republic.

What was the origin of the war, no one now remembers. That it was undertaken in order that the President of either San Salvador or Honduras might gather into his cattle fold a few of his enemy's best animals, is of course understood. Still, there yet lingers in the Central American breast a sufficient respect of public opinion to restrain a government from proclaiming war on the avowed ground that an eligible herd of cattle exists in a neighboring State, and it is therefore probable that some Central American parody of the Schleswig-Holstein question furnished the pretext of the quarrel. However this may have been, the San Salvadorians invaded Honduras with a grand army of several hundred men, and having surprised MEDINA, the Honduran President, engaged in the solitary gathering of berries or the most exciting sport of angling for cat-fish, with a view to the next day's Executive dinner, skillfully surrounded him, and with reckless bravery made him a prisoner.

This brilliant action, it will be perceived, left Honduras without a de facto President. Gen. MEDINETA, the San Salvadorian commander, being aware of this fact, and having doubtless an eye to the legitimate succession to the national berries or cat-fish, in the possession of the captured President, indulged the happy thought of proclaiming himself President of Honduras. He not only carried out this idea, which was a sufficiently easy matter, but he accomplished the more difficult undertaking of completely reconciling President MEDINA to his sudden deposition. The means by which the latter feat was accomplished are not positively known, but from the fact that MEDINA was subsequently found drinking the pulque and smoking the cigars of MEDINETA, it is supposed that the bribe of a substantial dinner, with free admission to the private stores of the San Salvadorian commander, entirely reconciled him to the loss of his official position.

So far MEDINETA had prospered beyond his expectations, and it only remained for him to levy and collect a tax upon his new subjects, and then to drive their cattle over the border of San Salvador. While he was maturing his plans for this feat of finance and statesmanship, he, in his turn, was surrounded and captured by a Honduran named SANCHEZ, who had marched an army to the defense of his melons and mules. SANCHEZ proved himself to be not only a sharp business man, but a person of unparalleled impudence. He put MEDINETA into the market and demanded $10,000 as his ransom. Now, the idea that any Central American army would care to ransom its General is so preposterous that SANCHEZ's action would have been stark lunacy had there not been a British Consul somewhere in the neighborhood. This Consul must have been a very inexperienced person, or he would not have imagined that he had any possible concern with the fate of a San Salvadorian statesman, and he must have been very weak to have acceded as he did to the impudent and extortionate proposition to pay $10,000 for a Central American magnate. However, he actually paid the money in utter carelessness of the market price of Central American Presidents, which for a long series of years has ruled greatly below the sum demanded of him. Having obtained the money, the astute SANCHEZ, who retained his prisoner with the view of robbing him a second time, turns to some other humane and prodigal Consul. In the meantime MEDINA, fearing that some one might try to convert him into merchandise to be palmed off upon the ingenuous Briton, fled into the wilderness. As matters now stand Honduras is without a President, the San Salvadorian army is without a commander, and the placid SANCHEZ, being master of the situation, is quietly waiting for a rise in the price of statesmen.

What either party, with the exception of SANCHEZ, has gained by the war is not very evident. Neither can the next movement in the campaign be certainly predicted. Probably a revolution in San Salvador, which has now been due at least five weeks, will soon break out, and compel the San Salvadorians to return home. In that case SANCHEZ will probably hunt up MEDINA and offer both him and MEDINETA, in one lot, extremely cheap to the first customer he can find, proclaim himself President of Honduras, and with his $10,000 revel in pulque and fine lemons until he is deposed by the next successful Honduran adventurer.

What's in a Name?

The extent to which the foreign tourist visiting this country passes through "Rome," pauses at "Carthage," and arrives at "Alexandria," is extremely confusing to his previous ideas of geography—while he can hardly be expected to admire the taste which has multiplied "Brownvilles" and "Smith's Corners," to say nothing of the exasperating iteration of "Washingtons," "Madisons" and "Jeffersons."

The name of a town, however, is frequently decided by chance rather than by deliberate selection. If the Western pioneers, who purchase whisky from the shop that Mr. Smith has opened at the crossing of two roads, persist in designating that locality as "Smith's Corners," the name will adhere to it long after a pleasant and civilized settlement has grown up about it. People who own yachts and fast horses are, however, entirely at liberty to name them as they will, and their almost uniform lack of taste in the selection of names admits of no excuse.

As for yachts, it is to be expected that in many instances they will bear the names of ladies whom the yachtmen delight to honor. To this class of names no exception can be taken, although the consequent existence of frequent "Fannies" and multiplied "Mandes" is occasionally somewhat confusing. It is when the yachtsman goes outside the list of his lady friends that he betrays his weakness in the selection of names. Why should a yacht be called "Vivid," except to vividly display her proprietor's peculiar ideas of nomenclature? In what possible respect does a slender, graceful schooner resemble a "Tidal Wave," and upon what theory can we account for the existence of the "Qui Vive," except by supposing that she was christened under the delusion that "qui vive" is a literal translation of the English word "challenge?" "Tarolinta" is a melodious collection of syllables, but its meaning, if it has any, is not particularly clear. "Oriental," on the other hand, is a respectable adjective, but it scarcely describes the nature or purpose of a yacht. Of course, there are good and appropriate names to be found in the lists of our yacht clubs, and every one will recognize the fitness of such names as "Meteor," "Viking," and "Foam." What shall we say, however, to the "Vindex," and in what respect is it preferable to "Pontifex" or "Carnifex," both of which are unimpeachable Latin words, and, like "Vindex," have no possible connection with yachting?

Nevertheless, the yachtsman appears happy in nomenclature when he is compared with the turfite. A mere preposterous collection of names than those horse by the horses entered at the races of the present season could hardly be devised. What, it may be asked, has the "buzzard" in common with horseflesh, except after he has made a meal upon some fast race-horse? Why should "quietus" be expected to make good running, unless from the once intimate association of Courier & Enquirer—the former being suggestive of speed? Is there any ground for supposing that a "gray planet" moves faster than any other planet—say a black, or a magenta planet? And in what part of the heavens did the owner of the equine Gray Planet discover a heavenly body of that sombre hue? Woodbine may, perhaps, owe his name to a conviction on the part of somebody that at the end of a race he will vanish into that mystic obscurity in which woodbines are in the habit of twining—if the authority of the late Col. FISK is to be taken. There is, however, no possible explanation of such names as Shoeder and Mildew, while Kingfisher and Comus are alike conspicuously misplaced.

Now, it would seem a comparatively easy task to name both yachts and horses with some degree of propriety, even if their owners cannot rise to the higher plane of originality. Perhaps both yachtsmen and turfmen will undertake the task when they are convinced that the public is annoyed at finding a beautiful vessel or a superb horse bearing a preposterous name.

Enthusiasts Over Sea.

It is a fact worthy of serious thought that every European journal of influence that favored the Government of the United States, in its struggle with the rebellion, regards the proposal to raise Mr. GREELEY to the Presidency with frankly-expressed forebodings. Some of these journals, since the nomination at Baltimore, have anticipated with remarkable accuracy the nature of the alliances that nomination was destined to bring about. Having watched with shrewd and anxious eyes the course of our memorable battle for the Union, and carefully weighed and analyzed those forces which, after the military part of the work was done, were likely to be brought into political conflict, the writers for those journals naturally look on the present situation with keen solicitude, and as naturally express the belief that we are approaching a very critical emergency.

It is clearly perceived by these friends of the Union across the sea that if the Democratic Party—the party of secession, the party that upheld slavery and now upholds Tammany—the party that furnished the New-York draft riots, and left no stone unturned to embarrass the Government in its life and death grapple with the revolt—once more gets into power there will be grave danger that much of what has been done will be undone, and that many of the most important results of that magnificent war for national unity will be rendered worthless. These sagacious observers from afar are not deceived by the local coloring, the pretended objects of public good, whereby the real purpose of an immoral coalition are here sought to be tinted and disguised. They see clearly that the common object of the parties to the shameful alliance is success. Ambition and spite on the one hand, spoils and vengeance on the other, are hoped for from that success which assuredly could be gained by no other possible combination. Without GREELEY the Democrats had no chance, without the Democrats GREELEY had no chance. Such is the calculation of these precious allies, and to an eye a little withdrawn from the immediate scene the plan and motives are as clear as crystal. Whereas at home the specious pretext of reform is advanced as a cloak for the sinister purposes that are really contemplated, and some who are close by are deluded by it, from a short distance the sham is entirely transparent. The aim is not only to defeat GRANT and the Republican Party; it is not only to elect GREELEY and restore the Democrats; it is to reverse what has been achieved by the American people, to proclaim the war a failure, and to declare to the world that the sacrifices of the Great Republic, her tens of thousands of lives, and her millions of treasure, have been thrown away in vain.

Here, at home, some Republicans who cleave to Mr. GREELEY, may honestly fail to see this. They may fail to perceive a tendency as sure and as unerring as the course of the stream to the sea. That course is, nevertheless, certain and irresistible. It may be checked for a time, but it cannot be prevented. And, in like manner, the intent, the policy, the convictions of the men to whom Mr. GREELEY has sold his birthright for a mess of pottage—the chimerical promise of distinction, never to be realized—end in the sea of sectional strife, disunion, and, perhaps, civil war. These men, substantially, have no end, can have none, apart from office, except to undo the work of the war. The friends of the Union among leading foreign journalists—and if, during the war, they were few, they were stanch and strong—plainly show that they see and dread the evils we have described. Even more than the financial chaos which Mr. GREELEY's election, it is acknowledged on all sides would portend, they dread a fresh outbreak of the spirit of secession, with consequences for both whites and blacks that might easily exceed the horrors of the late war itself. The apprehension, given the proposed event, is, we repeat, not unfounded. But the very knowledge of this fact, as it spreads among the community and becomes generally appreciated, will, we are assured, make that event impossible. From the nettle danger, we shall pluck the flower, safety. For the people who rose in their might at the sound of the first gun at Sumter, and never laid down their arms until rebellion lay crushed at their feet before Richmond, are not yet prepared to confess their cause was wrong, their blood and treasure needlessly squandered, or even to imperil in any degree the first fruits of their victory.

MINOR TOPICS.

It would be interesting to know whose platform it is that Mr. GREELEY is supposed to stand on. The "Liberal" Republicans claim it as theirs, but we notice that the Albany Argus, in giving its reasons why Democrats can't vote for GRANT, says: "In the first place, Mr. GREELEY [illegible] the Democratic platform, and in the next place, he is the nominee of the Democratic National Convention." We have never heard that the Democratic Party took any part in the "Cincinnati Convention," or had any hand in the construction of the platform. If it is their platform, it can only be by adoption, and we submit that it has not been long enough adopted to warrant the Democrats in laying claim to its paternity, or boasting of it as its own exclusive property. But this is only a sample of the way in which the Democracy is swallowing up and appropriating to itself all there is of the "Liberal" Republican movement. By the time election day arrives, we doubt whether any Republican will be recognized in the movement at all, or be allowed a place on his own platform. Mr. GREELEY has told us how absurd it would be for a man to devise his neighbors to help him raise a house and then kick them all out-of-doors as soon as the roof was over his head. But suppose the neighbors who were invited, should kick the owner out and take possession of the house themselves? What then?

If we had frequent showers in this City during the Summer, the air would be much cooler, and the streets would be kept comparatively clean. Moreover, if we had plenty of shade-trees there would be fewer cases of sunstroke. Now, it is well established that frequency of rains depends in a great measure upon an abundance of trees, and it has been proposed to plant trees in the desert plains of the West in order to attract showers that will fertilize the soil. Why should not the same plan be tried in New-York? Were a tree to be planted in front of every house lot in the City, we should certainly have sufficient shade to render life not only endurable but pleasant during July and August, and we might, very possibly, succeed in materially increasing the Summer fall of rain. At all events, the experiment is worth trying, especially since it would add so greatly to the beauty of the City. Trees became rather unpopular here a few years ago, partly because the ailantus-tree proved obnoxious in point of perfume, and partly because worms infested every green thing. The sparrows have now exterminated the latter pest, and were our streets to be lined with maples, no one could fail to regard them as an unalloyed blessing.

"Suppose you do get a new chandelier," remarked a famous humorist to a friend who proposed to increase the brilliancy of his drawing-room, "you have nobody to play on it." This familiar story is inevitably suggested by the fact that the Philadelphians have built a steamer intended to ply between that pleasant inland city and Liverpool. Suppose they build an entire fleet of steamers, they will find nobody willing to take passage in them. Passengers, as well as freight, follow the shortest and cheapest routes. The English can afford to build and run steamers cheaper than we can build and run them, and hence English steamers will monopolize for some time to come the Transatlantic trade. Moreover, steamers which can run from Liverpool to the safe harbor of New-York in eight days, will carry freight and passengers to the complete exclusion of steamers that run from Liverpool to the difficult harbor of Philadelphia in eleven days. Of course, the Philadelphians have a right to build as many steamers as they choose, but it seems a pity for them to waste their money in building ships which will make their voyages in ballast and without passengers.

On the 17th of the month there will be an election in Prince Edward's Island for members of Parliament, at which time the question of uniting the Island to the Dominion will be voted upon for the third time. Twice before, the same question has been voted upon, and the people have decided to remain separate from the great British-American Confederation, and it is probable that the result of the present vote will be the same. While the Prince Edward people doubtless know their own interests better than the Canadians, who are so anxious to have them share the taxes and honors of the Dominion, it is rather strange that on this side of the Atlantic there should be so much opposition to the doctrine that people of one race and language should form one nation. South America is split up into a dozen petty nationalities; our own Southern States strove to separate from the Union, and the plan of uniting the British American provinces has met with steady opposition from a large part of their inhabitants.

Mr. DOUGLASS, the owner of the renowned schooner Sappho, who has challenged any English schooner to a race from Southampton around Cherbourg breakwater, justly finds fault, in a letter lately published, with the system of measurement adopted by the Thames Yacht Club. This system renders it impossible for the shallow American yachts to compete on fair terms with the deep English vessels, and Mr. DOUGLASS truthfully says that it is the reason why American yachts have so rarely taken part in English regattas. While all that he says is true, his remarks might be extended to other systems of measurement. In fact, the regulations adopted by most Clubs are extremely faulty. The measurement ought, it would seem, to include both hull and canvas, but it is limited sometimes to one, and sometimes to another, and in most cases is founded on untrue principles. The New-York Yacht Club has just adopted a new system, but little better than the one discarded; and the different Clubs throughout the country seem to invent systems to suit themselves.

A few days since Mr. GREELEY made the surprising announcement that he possessed an ear, and also a heart. The public received this announcement with some degree of incredulity, but when it was pointed out that the existence of ear behind the lofty barrier of shirt-collar was not an impossibility, it was generally conceded that Mr. GREELEY might very possibly possess the organs to which he had claim. Encouraged by the credence given to this statement, he has now made a new claim, which may not meet with the same reception. He informed the citizens of Freeport, Me., on Thursday, that the popular portraits which represented him with wandering cravat, corrugated boots, and intractable trousers, are not correct. "I still preserve," said this frank and fearless philosopher, "something of the human form." This may be true, but in making such a claim he makes a new effort to destroy his life-work. Has he not for the last forty years endeavored by labored eccentricities to produce precisely the opposite impression? And with what consistency can he now ignore his collar, his cravat, his hat, his coat, his trousers and his boots, and unblushingly insist that he preserves "something of the human form?"

The Straight Democrats of Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 16.—The straight Democrats of this county had a Convention today, and nominated the full county ticket—Lester R. Brown for Congress, and selected delegates to the Louisville Convention.

[illegible]

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., Aug. 16.—Horace Greeley left Portland on time which this morning, accompanied by a committee of escort from Portsmouth. Demonstrations were made at the different stations, and at Biddeford and Saco. At 11½ A. M. the train arrived at Portsmouth, and a procession, consisting of some twenty carriages of Portsmouth and the towns in the vicinity, received him and conducted him to the carriages that were in waiting. They were then driven through the streets, preceded by the United States Marine Band, to the Rockingham House, where, after a short interval, he appeared upon the steps of the hotel, and was introduced to the crowd in the street by Hon. J. S. H. Frink, who addressed to him words of welcome.

Mr. Greeley responded as follows:

FRIENDS AND FELLOW-CITIZENS: An unfriendly critic has suggested that in my passage through this State, I have frequently reminded the people that I was a native of New-Hampshire. I did so of my high race as a reason why I was an honest and honored man. I now claim it as a ground of exultation or pride on my part, for fellow-citizens, my early recollections attach me fondly to my native State. In the period of fifty to sixty years, when I was a child in New-Hampshire, I knew her people better than I can claim to know them today. I recollect the intensity of the sentiment of the great revolutionary struggle was still vividly remembered by the older portion of the people; that King George III., against whom these people made their protracted gallant struggle, still lived and retained through most of that decade; and something of personal bitterness mingled with tilted memories of their Kirk with that year warm, narrow-minded, wrong headed ruler. I remember, too, that at the gatherings of family kin around some preacher's fireside they used to sing ballads of the Revolution like "American Taxation," wherein the zeneth was out of all proportion to the depth, and the patriotism very far more prominent than the poetry. I remember, too, somewhat of the men of that period, for John Stark, the hero of the Bennington fight, was living at Amoskeag Falls, on the Merrimack—he who told his men on the eve of that fight that if they did not prove better men to man, than the 22 a head Hessians before them, then Molly Stark would sleep a widow that night. And about that old veteran gathered regularly each recurring Fourth of July and other patriotic occasions, a considerable but annually decreasing band of veterans to renew their recollections of that fight. Beside him, in our good old town of Londonderry, lived my mother's uncle, Col. George Reed, who by faithful serving throughout the revolutionary war, had earned and secured the esteem and confidence of George Washington, of whom he was a personal friend. I believe New-Hampshire had fewer demurrers while the Colonial Government was still tolerable and few tories, when the time had come to resist British tyranny, than any of her sisters in that day. Daniel Webster was the rising man of New-Hampshire, but hardly yet the leader of her Bar; for Jeremiah Mason still retained his residence as Portsmouth, having not yet taken his departure for the broader field afforded by the Boston Bar; nor had Jeremiah Smith concluded his brilliant and useful career at the Bar of Exeter.

Fellow-citizens: among those I cherish most and love most are the recollections of my mother and of those dear to her and therefore dear to me, and through whatever changes of fortune I have never forgotten the land of my birth. I am sure you will pardon the weakness, if such it can be considered, of one who has never ceased to be proud of the State of his nativity, and I trust has never given her reason to be ashamed to call him her son. I will no longer tax your attention.

The Rye Beach Clam-Bake—Mr. Greeley and Secretary Robeson Deliver Addresses.

RYE BEACH, N. H., Aug. 16.—Mr. Greeley left the Rockingham House, Portsmouth, for Rye Beach, escorted by a committee delegated from the latter place, and a long procession of citizens in carriages. A number of houses on the route were decorated with flags and inscriptions, and he was enthusiastically cheered as he passed. On reaching the Ocean House, Mr. Greeley alighted from his carriage and held a short reception in the parlors. He then proceeded to the residence of Mr. G. H. Jenness, where he dined. While there delegations of prominent gentlemen from Mississippi, Georgia and Tennessee called upon him and were introduced. At 4 o'clock Mr. Greeley went to the grove, a short distance from the Farragut House, where a clam-bake had been prepared. Stopping at the latter place, he stepped upon the piazza, and was introduced to the ladies and gentlemen assembled by Hon. J. B. Stoughton, of Washington, D. C., who made a brief speech of welcome, to which Mr. Greeley responded as follows:

I wish, ladies and gentlemen, it were true that I had laid aside all my cares and duties for a brief sojourn at this pleasant resting-place. I should be very grateful if circumstances enabled me to do so, as you are doing, as the yearnings of advancing years seem to require that I should do. I wish I could rest at the sea-shore, as you are now doing. Even today, while I linger here, I leave duties undone that ought not to be neglected. I did hope that this Summer would bring to me what no Presidential Summer ever yet brought. I hoped that, instead of an increase of labors, the present Summer would witness a diminution of them. In giving up journalism, I find that other and more pressing duties compel me to go here and there. To tell the truth, I have no relaxation, no rest. It has been said by a greater than than I that we have all eternity to rest in, and I will do what seems incumbent on me, hoping and expecting no rest just at present. As I am here only for an hour or two, I will bid my friends good-bye. I now cease from taking your patience further.

A levee was then held in the parlors, after which Mr. Greeley, escorted by a large number of citizens, among whom was Secretary Robeson, walked to the clam-bake, where, notwithstanding the rain which was falling, a crowd gathered.

After ample justice had been done to the feast, Secretary Robeson arose and said:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: Your distinguished guest is a native of New-Hampshire, while I myself am a stranger, seeking here what I cannot find at home. Nobody fails to recognize the greatness which belongs to our common country. Its spread is from the Lakes to the ocean, from the lie around from hayrock-bound coast, her rugged mountain sides, from her quiet farms, and busy villages, New-England has made her impress on every community. Her sons are found making the impress of their character, their speech and mechanism, and wherever they are found, they are influential. I felt, while for good strength all the channels of our country. All the political questions which have agitated our country in the past, and will agitate it in the future, are of a character to challenge the attention of manhood,

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The market for Real Estate is still characterized by the inactivity that usually prevails during the Midsummer season. The number of persons present at the Exchange yesterday, Friday, Aug. 16, was few, and the following constitutes all the business that was transacted there: James M. Miller sold by order of the Supreme Court under the direction of Walter L. Livingston, Esq., referee, the three-story, high-stoop, brown-stone house and lot, 18.3 by 100.9, situate on the south-west corner of Lexington-avenue and Eightieth-street, to Erastus Brestreet, plaintiff, for the sum of $11,000, subject to a prior lien of $7,000. The same Court sale of the premises known as No. 55 Gouverneur-street to Friday, Aug. 23, by order of John C. Bushnell, Esq., referee. The referee's sale by S. Disoso of the premises situate on the north side of One Hundred and Twenty-first-street and the south side of One hundred and Twenty-second-street, 225 feet west of Avenue A, comprising ten brown-stone houses and lots, did not take place, no persons interested in the case being present at the Exchange at the hour appointed for the sale.

On Thursday last, (Aug. 15,) A. J. Bleecker, Son & Co. sold on the premises at Rockaway, Long Island, nineteen village lots of ground for an aggregate sum of $7,650, every lot being sold to bona fide purchasers, all of whom paid their ten per cent. and auction fees immediately after the termination of the sale. TWENTY PER CENT. INVESTMENT.

THE AMERICAN BRIDGE COMPANY, OF CHICAGO, ILL.

L. B. BOOMER, of Chicago, President. (ORGANIZED AUG. 1, 1870.)

AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000

Since of this Company of the authorized Capital Stock of this Company, not having been subscribed, the balance thereof will be issued to Subscribers at par, payments for same to be made in four instalments of twenty per cent. each, viz.:

25 PER CENT. JULY 15, 1872.
25 PER CENT. AUG. 1, 1872.
25 PER CENT. SEPT. 1, 1872.
25 PER CENT. OCT. 1, 1872.

The Subscription Books now open at the office of the undersigned will be closed as soon as the new stock is fully subscribed. All payments in instalments may be paid with interest at time of subscription.

The total amount of stock issued at this time is $412,700, and on this basis the Company shows a net surplus of $156,280 97. And it now owns or controls the following Bridges, and works are now actively employed on their extensive works, and there now have on hand $1,250,000 of work for various Railroads in the United States, among which may be mentioned:

CHICAGO, R. I. & PACIFIC.
CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN.
MICHIGAN CENTRAL.
MISSOURI PACIFIC.
ATLANTIC & PACIFIC, &c.

and the Company is now actively work to the amount of over $6,000,000, including some of the largest bridges ever built in this country, to accept of which, and further business, necessitates a larger working capital, as immense amounts of material have to be kept constantly on hand, and the Company are frequently obliged to receive, in part payment for their work, railroad bonds, which, however, are good securities, but not always immediately marketable.

A point of incidental but great importance to those holding security in the form of Bridge Bonds, is the fact that the Company owns, including some of the largest bridges ever built in this country, to accept of which, and further business, necessitates a larger working capital, as immense amounts of material have to be kept constantly on hand, and the Company are frequently obliged to receive, in part payment for their work, railroad bonds, which, however, are good securities, but not always immediately marketable.

The cost of the American Bridge Company, though brief, has already fully demonstrated the profitableness of the enterprise. The Company has constructed shops, its organization, and up to the 31st of December, 1871, a total of 3,117 feet of bridges, 4 turning tables, and 18 iron roofs, and pneumatic and screw pile substructures, costing $3,400,000, and have facilities for the construction of pneumatic substructures, for the construction of iron bridges, and a capacity for the construction of at least 150 feet of bridge for every working day in the year.

The Iron Railroad and Highway Bridge at Leavenworth, 1,000 feet long, for the Union Pacific Railroad, Bridge across the Missouri River, of eleven spans of 250 feet each, were constructed by this Company.

The net profit arising from this business, as shown by the books of the Company up to the 31st of March, 1872, was the sum of $373,482 14, or at the rate of $924,082 28 per annum, being over 50 per cent. on the capital stock, and notwithstanding all the proposed new structures, machinery, &c., the Company will have much greater capacity, and the proceeds of the increased issue of stock will enable them to realize a net profit of $1,000,000 per annum, yielding of from $50,000 to $75,000 per year.

The Company can undoubtedly, on above basis, make dividends of from 30 or 35 per cent. per annum, and the stock is now selling at $105,000, with a fair prospect of considerable increase.

The undersigned are prepared to give to those inquiring, the fullest details and entire satisfaction respecting the responsibility of the Company's stockholders and the unquestioned integrity and ability of its officers.

We confidently commend to capitalists the above, as an investment worthy their attention.

JUDGE BARNARD.

The Hearing in the Impeachment Trial Closed.

In Closing Speech by Judge Van Cott—Barnard's Character Dissected—A Scathing Review of the Judge's Career.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 16.—The trial of Judge Barnard was finally closed at 3 P. M. today, at which hour Mr. Van Cott finished one of the most elaborate, searching and eloquent arguments ever addressed to a Court of justice. If it be true that the orator is he who condemns Cæsar and not he who simply pleases his audience, Mr. Van Cott might justly claim, as a tribute to his power, whatever condemnation shall fall upon the respondent—but Mr. Van Cott did both. The hearty applause which followed swiftly on the conclusion of his remarks, and which the President's gavel could scarcely subdue, evinced the sympathetic feeling evoked by the earnest and truthful sentiments of which his words were but the eloquent expression. Having taken up each article and carefully examined and explained the evidence in relation thereto, he concluded by asserting that the respondent's guilt was clearly proven, and claimed that if the Court convict at all the sentence ought to include disqualification from holding office hereafter. When he had concluded the Court went into executive session until the hour of adjournment arrived, when they dispersed to reassemble at 8 o'clock.

The following is a synopsis of the closing arguments:

Judge Van Cott, of the counsel for the prosecution, resumed his argument at the point where he left off yesterday, criticising the orders issued in the Nyce case, restraining the Erie Railroad Company from transferring the stock belonging to the English stockholders.

The counsel then took up the orders issued on the succeeding day, appointing a receiver of that stock. Respondent's counsel said that Judge Barnard, discovering an error on his part, made in the order of the 22d of June, restraining the transfer, revoked that order on the 23d, and issued another. How was it if he discovered an error on his part, that he repeated the order, and increased its enormity by adding to it the appointment of a receiver?

Mr. Beach replied that the second order was issued upon new facts presented.

Mr. Van Cott said that the counsel was continually falling into error concerning these facts. Judge Barnard, he claimed, did not revoke his order of injunction. He then proceeded to state that the first order was issued in March, and following that, there were two or three other orders. On the 22d of June there was a stipulation that there was a mistake as to violating the injunction, and proceedings were stopped as to contempt. There was no revocation of the order as alleged, on Judge Barnard finding that he had made an error. The counsel then referred incidentally to the case in which Judge Barnard issued an order to show cause in the Union Pacific Railroad, returnable at a certain future day, and said that before the arrival of that day he issued another order, ex parte, appointing a receiver, thus seriously interfering with the construction of a great transcontinental railroad. Returning to the case in which the order was issued, putting the stock of the Erie stockholders in the hands of a receiver, the counsel referred to the verification of the complaint made by James Fisk Jr., and complained that it was entirely insufficient. He asked if it was legal to allow a receiver to take away this property on simply the knowledge and belief of another man? The counsel then referred to the effort made to have $6,000,000 of stock registered, so that it would become marketable after it was released from the injunction, and asked why Fisk and White secured the order restraining the registration. Some one had a motive for this act, and who was it? We find Judge Barnard making this unlawful order to prevent the registration, and in all these orders there was no cause; but, nevertheless, they were issued, and by a manipulation on the part of Jay Gould $6,000,000 of this stock was actually stolen; so the evidence shows; and we find that 60,000 shares are locked up; are put in the hands of James H. Coleman, and for what purpose? Why, that they should not be voted upon. And what is the result? Are they not voted upon? When the election time arrives comes James H. Coleman, goes to the office and votes on these shares for the Erie party. Was this not a part of the ill-title scheme entered on? Then, by order of Judge Ingraham, this case is carried to the Supreme Court of the State, into the United States Court. Judge Blatchford then made an order taking this stock out of the hands of Coleman and Sanding it over to its owners. But what was then done? Why, the counsel for Fisk appears in the Court with a notice discontinuing the suits which had originated this litigation. Why discontinue these suits if they meant anything besides simply seizing on the books and stock for a certain purpose? Could the parties to these suits not obtain justice in the United States Courts? Then, on the 28th of February, Robinson was appointed receiver of all the stock held by foreigners in this country and on the complaint of Fisk, the date to this order is made in such a way as to cover the proceeding in the United States Court. Where was the sincerity, then, of discontinuance of the suits? Messrs. Evarts and Southmayd, shrewd lawyers as they are, fell into the trap of this discontinuance of the suits. They thought the proceeding was a bona fide one, and yet ere Mr. Swan could go from the Court-room to the office of his lawyers, he was served with the order appointing Robinson receiver. Now, said counsel, Judge Barnard knew this trick. He was fully aware of it. It was such conduct as this that he has seen another of the Erie men outraged all law. There was another flagrant circumstance in this connection. On the 17th of September he issued an order making these various orders a special term order. He knew all about these orders, and yet he made this order, which was disastrous to the interests of the owners of this stock, and dishonoring to the Judiciary of this State. This Robinson was in close, intimate association with Fisk, Gould and Barnard. He was in a position to borrow money from Gould. He borrowed money from Gould for Barnard, who says he borrowed it from James H. Coleman. Now, can a Judge borrow money from his suitors? And the fact is that three days before Robinson was appointed receiver, he was told by Fisk that he was to be appointed. How did Fisk know this? Was it not known then that there was to be a mere appointment of a receiver, as soon as the matter reached the United States Court? The counsel then passed to the case of the Union Pacific Railroad, criticising the validity of the claim of Fisk to the possession of any of the stock of that Company. Fisk claimed to have paid a certain price for the stock, whereas he had not paid the price entitling him to it. But that was not the question here. He claimed that this was not a case for an injunction; the Company was abundantly able to make good any claim he might have against it. But what reason was there in this case, or in any of the others, for an injunction interfering with the election of directors? He asked if a voter, believing that Tweed, Sweeny & Co. were unfit men to be elected to public office, could get an injunction from any Court restraining an election on that account. Counsel asked, then, if there was any conceivable reason for the issue of an injunction on the complaints in these cases, which were exactly similar to such a complaint as he had supposed. Referring to all these orders, he asked if they were merely accidental and without purpose. Then as to the effect of this order, making Tweed a receiver, which stopped work on a road struggling for completion, under the requirements of a law, within a certain time, any child could see, said counsel, that the object of this suit was to force the Company into the demands of James Fisk Jr. What was it that Mr. Bell said to Judge Barnard? He said, "Do you intend to succeed in subjugating Jim Fisk?" Why, said counsel, such a remark addressed to one of this Court would be a monstrous and intolerable insult; but to Judge Barnard it had the effect only to make him cringe and release, just a little, his hold on Mr. Oliver. Counsel then referred to the effect of the orders on the financial affairs of the Company. Its bonds before the orders were issued sold for 90, and immediately fell to about 65. It had on hand at the time some $10,000,000 of bonds, and the loss suffered was enormous. He asked if a Judge had the right to strike such disastrous blows to the interests of our citizens, and with his eyes wide open to the effect. Counsel then discussed the effect of the orders in the case of the Albany and Susquehanna Railroad Company and the authority for them. He controverted the necessity for these orders, and showed that all the complaints could have been answered by other legal proceedings. What these parties wanted, said counsel, was to carry an election, and to do this it was necessary to have possession of the stock held by foreigners; to get it in the hands of a receiver. This was the first step; then they needed to get possession of the books, and all this in order that the parties could steal possession of a railroad.

Counsel then proceeded to consider the case of the St. Paul and Milwaukee Railroad, and claimed that Barnard was perpetrating a great outrage in issuing the order he did. Counsel stated the circumstances of the case and pointed out what should have been the proceeding, showing that Judge Barnard had no jurisdiction. And yet, what happened? Why, Judge Barnard appointed a receiver on a bond of $250, as security, executed by a non-resident of the State. What security was this for, interference with an important and wealthy Company, whose railroad ran through three States of the West? It appears that Shafer appears before Judge Barnard, whom he had been engaged in the intellectual occupation of whittling a stick. Shafer states his complaint; Judge Barnard expresses doubts as to his jurisdiction; Shafer relies he has a case; Barnard asks where it is to be found, and Shafer is unable, not remembering, but finally retains it. Judge Barnard then issues his order, which, in its effect, inflicts a loss upon this Company amounting to millions of dollars. Is this proper action on the part of a Judge? In this carefully considering the laws and the facts of cases brought before a Judge? How what was the object of this movement? Mr. Brieff and his associates in the complaint were dealing largely in the stock of the road. The price of the stock was advancing, and they were short, to use the language of the street. The were short and had heavy contracts to deliver this stock. That state of affairs was ruinous to them, and something must be done to relieve them, hence this order must be secured in order that the advance in the price of the stock should be checked, and a decline secured, and all this was done on a sham suit based on a $250 bond. Counsel then considered the case of the lease of the Olympic Theatre, and after stating the case, which was that the receiver, through an order issued by Judge Barnard, leased the theatre to his son-in-law for some $15,000, when there were higher offers, and one by Barney Williams of $20,000. Here, said counsel, was a case of a Judge doing an act Chancellor, who is due it was to act by the best interest of infants, making an order by which those infants were deprived of some $20,000, for the lease was for three years. Counsel then examined the allowances made by Judge Barnard in the case of Shephard against Thompson-Tighe and Dwight, which allowances he denounced as exorbitant. Counsel alluded to other cases of like character. Counsel then detailed the case of the registers arrested on a charge of false registration of voters. A writ of habeas corpus, said counsel, was issued by Judge Barnard, made returnable at his house at a certain hour the same evening. The eight men arrested were brought there, and Judge Barnard, in his testimony said, that it being a rainy and muddy night he ordered that the men should not come into his house; into his Court; but be kept waiting in the street. The return is passed upstairs; some conversation is had over the balusters, and the return is passed back again with a discharge written on it, and the prisoners are set at liberty. Counsel then considered the Pacific Mail Steam-ship Company case, when Judge Barnard sent an order to that Company that unless a certain amount of money is paid by Monday morning he would imprison them for contempt. Such an order was entirely without the authority of law. He had no right to make use of any such threat. Counsel then glanced at several other minor points in the charges, and which he presented with much clearness and force, and proceeded to speak in general terms of the case. He claimed that the prosecution had established all the charges made against the respondent, and called for the full sentence provided for by the Constitution. This the people demanded—the people who had seen their highest office degraded. They will not be satisfied with the mere removal of this Judge, to be again re-elected. He wanted the judgment of the Court to be a logical judgment. He wanted the full measure of the full punishment provided by the Constitution inflicted. Never, he said, was a judgment more anxiously waited for by the people than this. He referred to the precedents in England, where the punishment of Judges, much more severe than our Constitution provides, had had the effect of stopping impeachments there.

On his concluding, there was applause, which was promptly checked by the President. On motion of Chief-Justice Church, the Court then went into private session.

The debate in the private session of the Court, which lasted nearly one hour before the recess, was on the question of having a stenographer present to take the discussion and proceedings had on the final action of the Court, it being proposed to have the remainder of the proceedings in private. The question was not settled at the time of taking the recess.

At 8 o'clock the doors were opened, and the Court took a recess until 8 P. M.

Speculation as to the Verdict—Barnard's Friends Less Confident.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 16.—The Court met again in secret session at 8 P. M., and continued until 9 o'clock, when they adjourned till tomorrow, at 10 A. M. What passed is not positively known, but it is confidently asserted that a vote was taken on nine of the articles, including the first eight, which relate to the Erie and Union Pacific cases, and the twentieth, which covers the bribery charges specifying the gift of $10,000 from Fisk and the Erie claims. The Albany and Susquehanna litigation was skipped for the present. How the vote stands can only be conjectured, but it is asserted that it was nearly if not quite unanimous for conviction, and the fact that so much was accomplished in so short a session tends to confirm the assertion. It is also said that strong arguments were made by two of the members in favor of including disqualification in the sentence. The fact stated in yesterday's TIMES that Barnard's friends in the Assembly, offered to submit to removal last Winter, if a resolution to that effect were brought in, instead of to impeach and the fact that a stronger case than has ever before been presented to a Court of Impeachment has been presented here, being taken as the basis of their argument. Great excitement has prevailed in the hotels ever since the session began. Barnard's friends have ceased boasting that acquittal is sure, and now claim only that the sentence will not include disqualification.

No speeches were made in the session to-night in regard to disqualification, as the question of the sentence was not reached; but it is said that the spirit developed in the discussion indicates that Barnard will be disqualified. Much difference of opinion is said to have been shown in regard to the twentieth article. It is probable that the entire session of to-morrow will be consumed in discussion, and that the vote will not be made public before Monday.

THE NUMANCIA.

Abatement of the Yellow Fever—The Vessel to go to the South-West Spit Today.

No new cases of yellow fever appeared on board the Spanish war vessel Numancia yesterday, and all the patients afflicted with the malady were pronounced convalescent by the physician of the ship. In anticipation of removal to the Lower Bay, her fires were kept banked, but the vessel kept her anchorage in the Narrows all through the stormy day, in consequence of the failure of the authorities to decide upon the safety of her removal to the locality suggested by Pilot Commissioner Blunt. Gillespie, the pilot who brought the vessel to her present anchorage, still kept to his opinion as to the risk of her removal to the South-West Spit, and declined taking her thither on his own responsibility, alleging that there would not be sufficient spare depth in case of a gale or heavy sea. The Pilot Commissioners held a meeting during the day, but decided not to take the responsibility of a matter in which they had no jurisdiction; but after consultation with the Spanish Consul, Gillespie was dispatched to Dr. Vanderpoel, who directed him to proceed to the vessel at 3 P. M. today, in case of fair weather, and to remove her to the safest anchorage that could be found in the neighborhood of the South-west Spit. So confident is the Health Officer of the absence of danger to the City that the officers of the vessel were yesterday permitted to send on shore, by Pilot Gillespie, a package of fumigated letters, in care of the Spanish Consul.

A PICNIC TODAY.

The Up-Town Children Going Up the Sound.

Programme of the Day—The Fun of Everything—Prospective Entertainment—Statement of the Fund.

Today, if the storm does not continue, the twelfth of our series of excursions will take place. As already announced, the children of the west side, above Fourteenth-street, to the number of about 1,500, will participate in the pleasures and festivities of the day. These children have been procured by the Deputy Superintendents and visitors of the Up-town District, under the direction of Rev. E. B. Lescock, and they will report at 8 o'clock, on the pier at the foot of Twenty-eighth-street, East River, where the barge Sarah Smith will take all on board, for the purpose of carrying them to Oriental Grove, on Long Island Sound.

The usual complete and ample preparations have been made for feeding and taking care of the children. Our steward, Mr. James Proctor, with his corps of waiters, will be on hand at a very early hour, and will have breakfast ready for them shortly after starting, consisting of substantial sandwiches and mugs of milk. Later in the day, additional sandwiches, cake, lemonade and ice-cream will be distributed. The band from Governor's Island will be in attendance, and the Punch and Judy show, now considered by the children as one of the great points of the excursion, will again help to amuse the little ones. Superintendent Kelso will furnish the usual escort of policemen. As we have been singularly fortunate as to the weather, should today prove fine, we may expect a most pleasant excursion.

On Wednesday next the thirteenth excursion will take place. It will be composed entirely of colored children; and on Saturday next the Shantytown children will profit by the Fund. After these there will only be two picnics, which will close the series for 1872.

The following contributions to the Fund were received yesterday:

Mrs. W. C. Schemerhorn for K.	$10 00

Comments of the Press.

From Bright Words.

To the NEW-YORK TIMES alone is the sole credit due of originating the grand idea of picnics for the poor children of large cities. Through their exertions the poor little ones of New-York have already enjoyed eight of these excursions, and through the influence of good example the noble work has been commenced in Philadelphia, and the poor children of that city are now enjoying a series of these excursions. Extreme as the TIMES is, we sincerely hope that this good example will be followed in all the large cities of the United States, and that the proprietors of the NEW-YORK TIMES may have the pleasure of knowing that their plan, at first intended only for the poor of our own City, has been adopted all over the country, and that thousands of poor children are daily thanking them for the pleasure they enjoy.

The Baltimore Gazette.

The picnics for poor children still continue in New-York, and the response to the appeal made for funds for these excursions is remarkable and noteworthy. The call in the TIMES was answered at once. The programme of a day's enjoyment for these children is very simple, and the expense very slight, it being estimated to be dependent for every three children. The start is of course made in the morning. The ladies and gentlemen in charge, volunteers, of whom there are so many ready to lend personal aid, arrange the ragged, noisy, excited crowd on the special train provided. Policemen are stationed on the platforms to prevent any person leaving the car while in motion. Sandwiches, cake and lemonade are distributed on the way, and the eager, worn faces light up, and dirty little hands convey the coveted dainties to mouths that are in unison for the hands in appearance. Arrived at their destination—Rockaway Beach, or some place on the water side—the first thing is a bath and a general purification of the ragged crowd, after which the day is spent as may seem best to those who superintend the excursion. From 500 to 1,000 children, a motley array of all sizes, many bare-headed, with bare feet, and clothing composed of all varieties of shreds and patches, take part in this great charity, and for a day, at least, are happy in the pure, fresh air of the country. Present appearances indicate, also, that these excursions will not cease with the present year, but will be annual in their recurrence.

The Providence Journal.

The closer the attention given to the work of the NEW-YORK TIMES in behalf of the poor sick children of New-York, the more one is gratified at the spirit which conceived and carries on the benefaction, and at the liberality of the well-to-do class of the great Metropolis. The proof is ample that charity still abides, that the wealthy are humane, that the brotherhood of the race is a recognized fact of the most favored zone, and Saturday's fortunes that Christianity, so far from being a failure, is the root and strength of our civilization. The receipts in cash, up to last Saturday night, were $18,500, of which nearly $12,000 remains unexpended. But this does not tell the whole story. Railroad companies, hotel keepers, jewelers in provisions and medicines, have deducted largely from their customary prices, and the whole city has done something in aid of the charity. Five hundred families, or 1,800 persons, have been relieved, four-fifths of whom were children of tender age. One good woman reports that she has taken from a German house a child worth saving, as she says. But of the great good done there can be no doubt. In the terribly depressing weather we have had, little luxuries have been worth more in many cases than medicine. Lives have been made more comfortable, and lives have been saved. The Times is deserving of great praise, and New-York is shown to be at heart worthy of its position and wealth.

SARATOGA RACES.

A Dismal Day—The Races Postponed on Account of the Bad Weather.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SARATOGA, Aug. 16.—This is a dreary day for Saratoga, and general gloom prevails. The morning broke cloudy, and a leaden-hued sky hung over the village until 9½ o'clock, when rain began to fall, and has come down steadily, converting the streets, roads, and the track into a compound of dark and mud, and rendering the postponement of the races until to-morrow. The betting men, who have their money locked in the pool-box, express their disgust in unmeasured terms, as if that would alleviate their pecuniary sufferings, while the luckless ladies who had arrayed themselves in the most bewitching toilets, declare Jupiter Pluvius to be an unmannerly knave, and not to be trusted.

The rain has, in a measure, altered the condition of things for the races, and the friends of Meteor in the Kentucky stakes are in hopes of his being able to carry off the prize on a heavy track, as he is considered by his owner to be a good horse in the mud. The backers of Jo Daniels are defiant, however, and he remains the favorite against the field. Col. McDaniel keeps very quiet, and has no information to give the speculators as to the condition of his stable. London had a very fast trial of two miles a few days ago, and ran the distance in 3:36¾ with his shoes on. I have heard these stories of fast trials so frequently that I am somewhat chary of believing them, and it is evident from the betting this morning that the knowing ones are of the same opinion, as he is selling at a very low figure.

The Summer Handicap is receiving much attention, not for the intrinsic merit of the horses engaged, but from the very uncertainty of the result. Defender, who is five years old, carries but 108 pounds, while Wiesenap, four years, is weighted with 121 pounds, and Hubbard, three years, has to carry 114 pounds of iron, which is his full weight. The distance is two miles and a quarter, and, with striking inconsistency, Hubbard is the favorite. He has never shown himself to be a really good colt, and in his three-year-old form has not been credited with a race, and in his two-year old form, won but once the Tolly stakes, three-quarters of a mile, at Monmouth Park, in 1:12, which is very ordinary time. The Kentucky stake will be more of a conundrum than the other two races. Two-year old races are always uncertain, and when a lot of good ones are to start, the bookmakers find it a difficult matter to place them, especially on a heavy track, as will be the case to-morrow. Elmer & Tree are to start Butler and Strachina, the latter an imported colt, which will be shown for the first time. Belmont will send out Silk Stocking, a son of Kentucky, and probably Electra. Gov. Bowie will start his Eclipse colt Catesby, who won the Saratoga stakes at the last meeting, and on that account upset the knowing ones. McDaniel will be represented by Katie Pease, a full sister to Hubbard. Liverpool will carry the colors of R. W. Walden, and Mr. Cameron will start either a colt or filly by Leamington. Notwithstanding that Catesby is the only winner of the lot, Belmont's entry is the favorite, but I do not think his colors will be borne to the front on this occasion.

Floods in Massachusetts.

LOWELL, Mass., Aug. 16.—The Merrimack River has risen about eighteen inches, and the water is now overflowing portions of the cofferdam, partially constructed to enable the laying of the water-works pipe under the bed of the river at Hunt's Falls. Thousands of acres of meadow lands in Tewksbury, known as the Shawsheen Trull and the Kelleigh Meadows, are overflowed, the water nearly reaching the top of the grass, none of which has been cut. The same state of affairs is reported from many places along the Concord River.

LOWELL, Mass., Aug. 16.—The Merrimack River continues to rise, and great fears are entertained by Messrs. Norcross and Saunders that their booms, holding 14,000,000 feet of lumber, at Pawtucket Falls, will not hold. All available cordage in the city was obtained today, and also a quantity from Boston, which was to be spotted as stays. But few logs have as yet escaped.

The Robert Atwood Frauds.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Aug. 16.—Robert Atwood, this evening, insisted on being surrendered by his bondsmen, and was lodged in jail. His peculations are the universal topic of conversation, and further developments confirm the belief in their magnitude. The losses of the banks, however, are not so great as at first supposed, many of them having collateral and others having good names on the paper with him. The Citizens' Bank, which was reported on the most heavily involved, is said to have about $50,000 of his paper, but some of which are sight drafts on New-York, where there is no money to meet them.

Congressional Nomination in Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 16.—The Democrats of the Third District, at Cleveland, yesterday, nominated D. M. Key for Congress.

The yacht Blossom, of Jersey City, sailed for Far Rockaway on Thursday morning with a crew of eleven men. When entering Rockaway Inlet she was struck by a heavy sea during the storm. A huge breaker washed the deck, and another carried away the bowsprit, while a gust of wind broke the mast and the yacht capsized. The crew clung to the bottom of the boat, and thus saved their lives. In the locker was $600, which, with the clothing of the crew, was lost. The Blossom sailed last Saturday morning for shore, where for five hours they stood exposed to the storm.

The steamer Sewanhaka, in coming down the Sound, yesterday, met with an accident which disabled her. The piston-rod of her walking-beam gave way, causing a rush of steam into her cabin. The passengers were greatly alarmed, and a general rush was made for life-preservers, but no actual danger existed, however, and the panic soon subsided. All hands were transferred to the steamer Martin and brought safely to the City. The engineer of the boat stuck to his post at the risk of his life, and his efforts prevented what might have been a disastrous accident.

Weather permitting, a picnic excursion will be given today, under the auspices of the Brooklyn Daily Union, to the old ladies of the Graham Home and Church Charity Foundation Asylum. They will go to Canarsie and Rockaway.

The storm of Thursday night and yesterday damaged, to a considerable extent, several of the streets. The lower portions of the city were flooded, cellars were filled with water, and the inhabitants in some localities were forced to vac
